

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION.

CAIUS SALLUSTIUS CRISPUS was born at Amiternum, in the country of the Sabines, A.U. 668, B.C. 86, being nine years younger than Cato, fourteen younger than Cæsar, and twenty younger than Cicero. His family was Plebeian. We do not hear that any of the name obtained public distinction before the historian himself, who became Quæstor about the year B.C. 59, and tribune of the Plebs in 52. Little dependence can be placed on the Declamatio in Sallustium, a piece which is founded perhaps on the invective against him by Lenæus, a freedman of Pompeius; but according to the constant tradition of Roman antiquity, Sallust was, as there asserted, a dissipated man and a profligate politician, who attached himself to the popular party, and sought the offices of the state in succession, in order to finish his career with the enjoyment of a lucrative province, and the means of accumulating a large fortune. He was an active promoter of the prosecution of Milo for the murder of Clodius, B.C. 52, and thus perhaps ingratiated himself with the most factious of the parties in the city. The share he took in this business may have been partly owing to the chastisement he is said to have received from Milo, for the seduction of his wife. (Varro, quoted by Gellius, xvii. 18). In the year 50, at a moment when the spirits of the senatorial party were unusually elated, Censors were appointed, the first after a long interval, and the list of the senate was purged of many of the opposite faction upon the plea of scandalous life, or other personal disqualifications. Among the sufferers was Sallust, and his intrigue with Milo's wife has been alleged as the cause assigned. It is hardly probable however that such a cause could have been put forth at a time when profligacy was so common among the ranks of the nobility, still less that it could have been the real motive for his expulsion. Hereupon, it is affirmed, Sallust repaired to Cæsar's quarters in Gaul, and enrolled himself at once among his warmest partizans. Such is the statement of the author of the Declaratio, which however is not in itself of much value. On the contrary, Cicero speaks at a later period of Cæsar pardoning a Sallustius : etiam Sallustio ignorit : (ad Att. xi. 20), as a captured or converted opponent ; and we know of no other Sallustius to whom he is likely to refer. But from this event we may, at all events, more confidently date the bitter hostility to the Roman oligarchy which Sallust displays throughout his writings.

The disgrace he had undergone did not prevent Sallust from succeeding, under Cæsar's supremacy, to the high office of prætor, which he acquired in the year 47, the next after the battle of Pharsalia. This appointment restored him to a place in the Senate. He was employed in the following year in Cæsar's campaign in Africa, against the remnant of the senatorial party under Scipio and Cato. Upon its successful termination, he was left there as governor of the province of Numidia, which, upon the death of its king Juba, was incorporated with the possessions of the republic. It does not appear that he continued in this post beyond the usual term of one year ; yet, in that short time, he contrived to amass the vast treasures for which he became afterwards notorious. His countrymen were shocked at the alleged profligacy of his conduct, especially, as we are told, after the vehement indignation he had expressed in his writings against the corruption and extortion of the Roman nobles. See Dion's Roman History, xlivi. 9. καὶ τὸν Νομάδας λαβὼν ἔστι τὸ ὑπῆκοον ἐπήγαγε, καὶ τῷ Σαλονοτίφ, λόγῳ μὲν, ἄρχειν, ἔργῳ δὲ, ἀγειν τε καὶ φέρειν ἐπέτρεψε. ἀμέλει καὶ ἐδωροδόκησε πολλὰ καὶ ἡρπασεν· ὥστε καὶ κατηγορηθῆναι αἰσχύνην αἰσχίστην ὁφλῆσαι, ὅτι τοιαῦτα συγγράμματα συγγράψας, καὶ πολλὰ καὶ πικρὰ περὶ τῶν ἐκκαρπουμένων τινὰς εἰπὼν, οὐκ ἐμμῆσατο τῷ ἔργῳ τὸν λόγους. Sallust was even menaced with an impeachment for the spoliation of his province; but it does not appear that he was brought to trial. He returned to Rome and formed the magnificent gardens, known by his name, on the Pincian hill, which became eventually the property of the Emperors, and were a favourite resort of Augustus, Vespasian, Nerva, and other sovereign rulers. The story that he married Terentia, whom Cicero had divorced, is devoid of probability. Sallust lived from henceforth in luxurious retirement, having attained wealth and ease, the main objects of his ambition. He died B.C. 34, three years before the battle of Actium.

Some of the worst reflections upon Sallust's character are derived, as we have seen, from the Declamatio in Sallustium, the authenticity of which is at least doubtful. He had spoken disparagingly of Pompeius, calling him a man, oris probi, (some read, improbi) animo inverecundo, and Lenæus, Pompey's freedman, had attacked him furiously in consequence, describing him, among other things, as nebulonem vitâ scriptisque monstrosum, with which he coupled a charge of ignorance, affectation, and plagiarism. He is said to have been defended by Asconius Pedianus, who wrote a life of him, in the time of Augustus: but the unfavourable view of his character prevailed. Porcius Latro, a grammarian of the reign of Claudius, repeated the charges against him, and we have seen that Dion believed and propagated one, at least, of the gravest of them. We can only say that Dion, as is well known, generally inclines to the worst view of every man's character. Impressed with this concurrence of authorities, critics have commonly supposed that the Sallustius, whose profligacy is noticed in the second satire of Horace's first book, is no other than the historian; for which however there is no further ground than the identity of name. Sallust left no descendants of his own, but he had a brother by whom the name was perpetuated; and the Crispus Sallustius to whom Horace addressed the second ode of his second book was the historian's grand-nephew. The allusion there made to the wealth of Libya is the more appropriate, considering their relationship, and the probability that the person addressed inherited the fortune which had been accumulated in that country.

The extant works of Sallust are two historical pieces, on the conspiracy of Catilina, and the war with Jugurtha. He is believed to have written also a contemporary history of Rome, beginning with the insurrection of Lepidus, B.C. 78, and continued in five books to the year 66. This may have been intended as a continuation of the work of Sisenna on the civil wars of Sulla. See Vell. ii. 9. It has perished with the exception of a few considerable extracts from the speeches it contained, and a large number of detached sentences, collected from a variety of writers, and evincing the great and long-continued popularity of the work. Two extant epistles or harangues addressed to Julius Cæsar, and entitled Epistole de republica ordinanda, have also been ascribed to Sallust, but their authenticity is very questionable.

The Catilina, or Bellum Catilinarium, is a history of the conspiracy of Catilina, b.c. 63. It contains in itself no distinct evidence of the date of its composition. Those who affirm on the authority of St Jerome (in Jovin. i. p. 52) that the author married Terentia, presume that subsequently to his marriage he would not have alluded to the disgrace of Terentia's sister, the Vestal Virgin whom Catilina was accused of seducing, (see Catil. ch. 15). But as both the date and fact of the marriage are quite uncertain, such a presumption can be of little force for determining the period of this composition. Others again contend that Sallust would not have invented a speech for Cæsar, (Catil. ch. 51), instead of giving the genuine oration, during Cæsar's actual lifetime, and therefore argue that the work must have been written as late as b.c. 44, the year of Cæsar's death. There can be no force, however, in this argument to those who know the indifference of Sallust, and of the ancients in general, to the authenticity of such rhetorical exercises as the harangues with which they studied to adorn their narratives. On the other hand, we have to set Dion's remark about the inconsistency observed at the time between Sallust's conduct in his province, and the sentiments declared in his writings. Now the Jugurtha was certainly written after his provincial administration, in b.c. 46; and we can hardly doubt therefore that Dion refers to the reflexions on the nobility at the beginning of the Catilina, which accordingly must have been written at an earlier period. That the Jugurtha was written after b.c. 46, may be safely inferred from the author's reference to the Punic books of king Hiempsal, which he consulted for it, or rather which had been explained to him, (see Jugurtha, ch. 17), indicating clearly that he was himself on the spot at the time.

The Catilina and Jugurtha are what are denominated in, modern times Monographies; i.e. narratives of a detached series of connected events; nor is it unlikely that the fragments of Sallust's Histories belong, in fact, to similar treatises on the war of Lepidus, the war of Spartacus, and possibly the wars of Sulla and Marius. Altogether, these works would have formed a pretty complete history of Roman affairs between the years b.c. 117 and 62. The events belonging to the earlier portion of this series had already been related by Roman writers. Sisenna had composed an account of the wars of Marius and Sulla; personal memoirs had been written by Rutilius Rufus, consul, b.c. 105, by Æmilius Scaurus, by Sulla himself, and by Lucullus. Of Sisenna's work at least the testimony both of Cicero and Sallust leaves us little to regret; and it does not appear that the ancients themselves made much use of those of the distinguished statesmen mentioned above. Sallust therefore is the first Roman historian whose account of these times became generally accepted by his own countrymen as authoritative. He owes this distinction probably quite as much to the charm of his style, as to any presumed authenticity in his narration. Indeed he seems to have been the first of the Roman writers who made style a matter of primary importance. The idea however that he took Thucydides for his model, rests upon the occurrence of a few philosophical reflexions, which seem to be directly imitated from the Greek writer. In the mere form of Sallust's expressions it would be difficult to point out any such resemblances to his supposed master. Seneca speaks correctly of his amputatae sententiae et verba ante exspectatum cadentia. The charge against him of affecting archaic words was made by his own contemporaries. Lenæus, above spoken of, calls him priscorum Catonisque verborum ineruditissimum furem. Another writer, Ateius the grammarian, was supposed to have assisted the historian by collecting antique words for him to interweave with his own language.

I cannot however distinguish any such character in Sallust's extant writings. In the Catilina and Jugurtha there is not, I believe, a single word used which is not also of frequent occurrence in contemporary and later writers. It is probable indeed that he clung to the old orthography of many words at a time when great innovations in that respect were taking place, and even affected to recur to modes of spelling which were becoming obsolete. Some of the best MSS. continue to present antique forms of many words, and these we may suppose have been faithfully transmitted to us from the original exemplars. But even these fluctuate in their orthography, and in an edition intended for the use of youthful students it seems best to abide by the standard of the best age of Latin literature. Accordingly, in this edition, the nom. and acc. plural of nouns of the third declension are always written with es, not is: the termination of the superlative with imus, not umus: verio and its derivatives are spelt with e not o: the abl. and dat. plural of the relative pronoun appears as queis not quis: the gerundial form is written with endo not undo; and so on in some other cases. Possibly the principle may be thought to be violated in the retention of the older form adineo for attineo, &c.; and also in writing lubido, Sulla, and perhaps some other words according to the more ancient orthography. The genitives Senati, tumulti, fide, die, the dat. usu, &c. are retained as belonging not to Sallust's orthography, but to his grammar.

The prevalent notion of the great brevity of Sallust's style, is derived perhaps from the description of Seneca above cited. It has had the effect of inducing the older commentators, and especially Cortius, whose authority was considered paramount for many generations, to reject as insititious, in innumerable places, the occurrence of the verb substantive after the partic. passive, and to expunge all repetitions of words which seemed superfluous to the sense of a passage, in spite of the concurrent testimony of the MSS. For instance, in one place (Catil. 51), the word lex occurs three times in one sentence : Tum lex Porcia aliæque leges paratae sunt quibus legibus, etc. But the fact is, that unless we are to suppose that his MSS., many of them very excellent ones, have been corrupted by officious transcribers beyond all others, Sallust is in some respects a writer more than usually redundant. Such in fact is generally the character of authors who write before the maturity of their language : and we may be sure that the affectation of cutting up sentences by the suppression of words which logically belong to them would be the vice of a later age, and foreign to the spirit of an ancient writer, especially of one who rather studied to copy a still remoter antiquity. We may conclude then that the amputatae sententiae referred to by Seneca, are the author's peculiar turns of thought, which are studiously abrupt and antithetical ; the verba ante exspectatum cadentia are certain harsh and jerking cadences in the composition, which are evidently prepared with a view to striking effects.

The text of the present edition is formed with due deference to the authority of the MSS. and of the citations of ancient writers. Several of the most disputed passages are quoted by the old Roman grammarians, and their reading of them is of course entitled to careful consideration.

The text given by Gerlach in his last edition, Berlin, 1852, very nearly corresponds, at last, after much fluctuation of opinion, with that of Kritz, Leipsic, 1828—1834, and, with the exceptions indicated above, adopted for the convenience of the young reader, I shall be found to agree, I believe, in almost every case either with one or the other of these eminent critics. In two or three places I have ventured to omit a gross expression ; a course which for my own part I could wish to see more extensively adopted in an age when the reading of Latin is becoming almost as common among women of polished education as in the good old times of Jane Grey and Elizabeth.

The annotations here offered to the student have been principally drawn from the variorum notes of Havercamp's edition, from Gerlach, and from Kritz. Much novelty of illustration is hardly to be expected upon a subject which has been so repeatedly treated, and most of the editors have done little more in this respect than copy from one another. The edition of Kritz however, which is mainly devoted to an examination of the author's grammatical constructions, is distinguished by great originality of research. I have appended his name only to a few of the notes ; but my obligation to his learning and acumen are manifold throughout. Some use has also been made of the recent edition by Dietsch, which has only reached me while these sheets were printing.

In the commencement of the Catilina Sallust describes in general terms the profligacy of his contemporaries, and particularly of the class of candidates for public office and distinction. The character of the arch conspirator which he proceeds to draw is represented as a natural development of the licentiousness of the times, and the conspiracy itself appears to be the legitimate fruit of the general abandonment of principles, and prostration of public and private virtues. But in order fully to understand it, we must supply a serious omission on the historian's part, and give some account of the state of parties at Rome at the moment of this frightful explosion. The civil wars of Marius and Sulla had been a contest between the mass of the citizens marshalled by a few ambitious nobles, and headed by a fortunate soldier, and the ruling class of senators and patricians, who maintained with tenacity the exclusive privileges assured to them by an obsolete constitution. Their families had been ennobled by public office, and enriched by public service, and they strove to keep to themselves the exclusive enjoyment of these advantages. This class however had suffered a severe defeat in the admission of the Italians to the Roman franchise, which, after a sanguinary war, though successful in the field, they had been constrained eventually to concede. Marius at the head of the popular party had humbled them by the successive acquisition of no less than seven consulships. They had invoked the aid of their military champion Sulla. A bloody civil war had ensued, with alternate success, and massacres had been perpetrated on both sides. Marius had died, and Sulla had ultimately established the ascendancy of the nobles or optimates, and in his dictatorship had imposed upon the nation a series of enactments called from his name leges Corneliae, for curtailing the prerogatives of the inferior orders, and confirming the supremacy of the senate as the ruling body of the state. The office of tribune particularly, the old constitutional safeguard of the Plebs, he had shorn of its principal functions, and he had excluded the knights from presiding along with the senate on the bench of justice. After three years possession of the dictatorship, which had been decreed to him in perpetuity, Sulla abdicated his extraordinary functions, and retired into privacy. Immediately M. *Æ*Emilius Lepidus, a factious noble, had raised an insurrection, with the promise of restoring the popular rights, Catulus, his colleague in the consulship, had taken up arms at the bidding of the senate and optimates, and had succeeded in putting him down. But the senatorial party was never free from the machinations of discontented or ambitious men of its own order, who sought to raise themselves to preeminence by intriguing with the popular faction. M. Licinius Crassus, and Cn. Pompeius, who had recently obtained the surname of Magnus, becoming consuls, b. c. 80, rescinded some of Sulla's measures, and conciliated in some degree the favour of the depressed Marians. When however Pompeius was called away from Rome to combat Mithridates the king of Pontus, the senate was persuaded to concede to him powers of unprecedented extent, the command namely of all the eastern provinces of the empire, for the sake of getting rid of him at the centre of affairs. During his absence rumours were rife of a fearful plot against the commonwealth, in which several men of high family and personal distinction were supposed to be concerned. The danger was believed to be pressing, and to combat it, the senate consented to the election to the consulship of a new man, M. Tullius Cicero, influenced partly by its reliance on his talents and activity, but partly, it may be believed, with a view to employ him as its instrument for the bold but hazardous coup d'état which it meditated.

The parties into which the Roman people were at this time divided were four: 1. The Senatorial, above described as the ruling class, comprising the greater number of the highest nobility, numbering perhaps an hundred or more great families, and constituting an oligarchy, powerful from its wealth, its long experience of office, and its almost hereditary command of the national armies. Among its leaders were Catulus, Lucullus, Sulpicius, Silanus, Scribonius, Hortensius; and it had recently enlisted as its champions both Cicero and Cato: 2. The popular or Marian party, of whom Cæsar, a connexion both of Marius and of Cinna, was now the chief, the strength of which lay in the numerous families which had been proscribed and excluded from office by Sulla,—in the favour of the lower classes of the city, and of a large portion of the knights, who were anxious to recover the privileges they had been deprived of, and to acquire more,—in the goodwill of the Itahan communities, which had obtained the Roman franchise through the efforts of the leaders of this party at an earlier period,—and generally in the support of the provincials, who looked forward to similar enfranchisement through the liberal policy which it continued to advocate: 3. The moderate aristocracy, who sought to mediate between these parties; some, as Cicero at an earlier period, with a view to strengthen the existing constitution by reforming it, others, as Pompeius and Crassus, in order to make themselves independent of the control of a jealous oligarchy: 4. The discontented and turbulent class, mostly military adventurers, who had been raised to importance in the civil wars, and had lost their consideration upon the re-establishment of peaceful government. Rejected by the ruling oligarchy, they attached to themselves the men of broken fortunes of every order of the state, especially the veterans whom Sulla had planted on confiscated lands throughout Italy, and who had squandered their ill-gotten plunder, and were ready to embark upon any new enterprize to recruit their fortunes. Of this military faction Catilina was the most conspicuous chief. He had been himself one of Sulla's officers, and is said to have made himself notorious even in his youth for rapacity and cruelty. He had killed with his own hand his brother-in-law Q. Cæcilius; he had tortured and slain Marius Gratidianus, a friend and fellow-townsman of Cicero; he is said moreover to have murdered his own brother; nor does Sallust fail to mention other crimes of peculiar atrocity as generally ascribed to him.

Although we learn the story of Catilina's wickedness chiefly from the mouth of his enemies, the popularity he enjoyed among a large class of licentious and dissolute young nobles may serve rather to confirm than to invalidate it. Rome was thronged with men of this character, who shrank from no atrocity in the prospect of plunder or advancement, and were ready to lend all their influence to a leader, however justly infamous, whose abilities might promote their selfish ends. A deeper shade of suspicion, however, has been thrown upon the genuineness of the colours with which Cicero and Sallust have painted the arch conspirator, from the fact of his having been a candidate for the consulship, and therefore we must suppose not altogether unacceptable to a much larger number of honourable citizens. Is it possible, we ask ourselves, that a man generally suspected of aiming at an abolition of debts no less than the subversion of institutions, could have hoped for a preponderance of suffrages among the citizens of any regulated community? In the face however of the concurrent testimony of all our authorities, we cannot doubt the general correctness of the charges against Catilina. Could they have been fairly questioned, we must suppose that Sallust, as a bitter enemy of his adversaries, would not have failed to suggest some extenuation of them. On the whole Sallust's history seems to be written with remarkable fairness. His character of his patron Cæsar exhibits no party bias, and his respect for Cato, the most determined of his opponents, is strongly felt and boldly expressed. He is accused of undervaluing Cicero's merit. It is difficult at least to fasten upon him any charge of overtly disparaging that statesman; though, were we to take Cicero's own account of the affair, or indeed those of some other writers, we should doubtless be disposed to rate the consul's importance at this time much higher than Sallust himself would allow us to understand. This is a point which must always be open to difference of opinion. It is not unreasonable, however, to believe that Cicero's influence has been generally overrated. The nobles had been long aware of the imminence of such an outbreak as that of Catilina: they were secretly well pleased at the opportunity it would give them to take up a bold attitude, and strike a blow, which, while it crushed the military faction, would inspire terror into both the Marians and the moderates. They were glad to use Cicero, as an able and popular man, but one who, as a new man, could be easily disowned and discarded if unsuccessful, as their instrument in this measure. Accordingly they helped to raise him to the consulship at the critical moment, to the surprise of all the world, and even of himself, such an elevation having never before been accorded to one of his rank, except to the great military champion Marius. As soon as their object was attained and the outbreak crushed, the nobles suffered Cicero to drop. When Pompeius returned from Asia, and encouraged the impeachment with which Clodius threatened him, for his stretch of the consular prerogative, they drew back from his defence, and he fell without an arm held forth to save him. It then appeared how totally devoid he was of personal influence or substantial power in the state. From that time, though suffered to return from his exile, his part in public affairs was only secondary, and became indeed daily more trivial. During the civil wars of Cæsar and Pompeius he was neglected, his counsel disregarded, and himself almost driven contemptuously from the camp of the oligarchs. Cæsar condescended to solicit his countenance, but received his refusal with the coldest indifference. The conspirators against Cæsar did not care to consult him, and after they had struck their blow were but little elated by his tardy adhesion. It was not till the liberators, Brutus, Cassius, and the rest, had quitted Rome for the East, till Antonius had taken up arms in the north of Italy, till Octavius had repaired to his legions to watch him, till even the consuls Hirtius and Pansa had marched forth from the city, that Cicero became at last the first man in the senate and the forum. For the few months, indeed, next ensuing he continued to take the lead in the domestic affairs of the republic; his influence within that sphere became really effective; he enacted a great part, and crowned his long political life with a glorious apotheosis. It is no reflection upon the wisdom and integrity of Cicero's public conduct to point out the inferiority of the position he was allowed to hold among his contemporaries; on the contrary, it may serve to display more fully the contrast between his honourable character and the selfish corruption of his times, that neither his talents nor his genuine patriotism availed to place him on the eminence from whence he could save the state from its conflicting factions. It is due however to Sallust to shew that the secondary place he assigns him is not really below the truth, nor to be ascribed to any unworthy jealousy on the part of the historian.

The Jugurtha, it must be admitted, is a work of far less interest than the Catilina. Farther removed himself from the period to which it refers, and with no personal knowledge of the events and characters it brings before us, Sallust in the second of his histories enters into an unequal rivalry with his earlier achievement. Nevertheless there is much life and expression in his portraiture of the times at Rome; the ambition of the nobles and the growing corruption of the people, as there represented, prepare us for the crisis of the civil wars which was soon about to be developed. The early career of Marius and Sulla, their selfish ambition and personal antagonism, serve as a preface to the records of slaughter and proscription with which their names were to become conspicuously blended. Jugurtha himself, the crafty Numidian, bold and active, with inexhaustible resources and devoid of scruples, combining the subtlety of the Carthaginian with the ferocity of the Moor, is interesting not only on his own account, but as a type of the African character, such as it was afterwards exemplified in Tacfarinas, and recently in Abd-el-kader. The struggle of the serpent and the eagle, so favourite a subject with poets and painters, has been delineated by no historian so vividly as by Sallust.

C. SALLUSTII CRISPI CATILINA.

I. OMNES¹ homines, qui sese student² præstare ceteris animalibus³, summa ope niti decet vitam si lentio ne transeant⁴, veluti pecora, quæ natura prona, atque ventri obedientia⁵, finxit. Sed nostra omnis

² Sese student: i.q. simply student. This construction is not unusual with verbs of wishing, seeking, &c. Compare Cic. de Off. i. 19. principem se esse mavult quam videri; ii. 20. ille gratum se videri studet; for princeps, gratus videri. Corn. Nepos, in Vit. Eumen. 8. illa phalanx non parere se ducibus sed imperare postulabat.

vis in animo et corpore sita est: animi imperio¹, corporis servitio magis utimur²: alterum nobis cum dis, alterum cum belluis commune est. Quo mihi rectius videtur³ ingenii⁴ quam virium opibus⁵ gloriam quærere; et, quoniam vita ipsa, qua fruimur, brevis est, memoriam nostri quam maxime⁶ longam efficere. Nam divitiarum⁷ et formæ gloria fluxa⁸ atque fragilis est; virtus clara æternaque habetur⁹. Sed diu magnum inter mortales¹⁰ certamen fuit, vine corporis arietes. Persius, Prol. in Sat. 12. Magister artis ingenique largitor Venter.

¹ Animi imperio. The soul is commonly represented as the ruler of the body. Comp. Cic. de Rep. iii. Deus homini, animus imperat corpori. Senec. Nat. Quæst. vii. 24. habere nos animum cuius imperio et impellimus et revocamus. Epist. 114. rex noster est animus. Claudian, iv. Cons. Hon. 234. hanc alta capitis fundavit in arce Mandatricem operum prospecturamque labori.

² Utimur: uti generally in a good sense, to employ to a good purpose, to enjoy the use of. Here the verb belongs strictly to imperio only, but governs servitio also indirectly by the figure zeugma: i. e. "we enjoy the government of the soul, but suffer the servitude of the body."

³ Quo mihi rectius videtur, "wherefore it seems to me the more right." Comp. eo profusius, c. 14.

⁴ Ingenii. Varro, contemporary with Sallust, introduced the double ii in these genitives. Later writers, imitating ancient spelling, frequently resorted to the single i. Hence the MSS. fluctuate. See Spengel on Varro, de Lingua Lat. p. 10. In this edition the double ii is preserved throughout, as the usual form.

⁷ Nam divitiarum. Compare Sallust, Jugur. 2. igitur præclara facies, magnæ divitiae, ad hoc vis corporis et alia hujusmodi omnia aliqui dilabuntur; at ingenii egregia facinora, sicuti anima, immortalia sunt. Tac. Agric. 48.

⁸ Fluxa: "fleeting," "fading;" fluidus, that which fleets or flows naturally; fluxus, that which becomes so by corruption or degeneracy, therefore generally of artificial things: but this distinction is not uniformly preserved. Here translate "fading," or "evanescent," as opposed to clara. "Beauty fades and decays, virtue shines and endures."

⁹ Habetur, "is esteemed," implying men's opinion of it.

¹⁰ Inter mortales; more emphatic, as being more universal than homines; as we say mankind for men. Comp. A. Gell. xiii. 28.

³ Alterum alterius auxilio eget:

Horat. Alterius sic Altera poscit open res. indigens ... eget. This tautology has given offence: many editions read veget, but without authority. Indigens may be taken absolutely, for mancum, debile; the redundancy may be compared with Virgil's Lapsa cadunt folia.

⁴ Initio. Comp. Cic. de Leg. iii. omnes antiquæ gentes regibus quondam paruerunt.

⁷ Metu perculti. The common notion that percussus refers to the body, percussum, to the mind, is erroneous. Either word is used either of body or mind; but percussus of the mind when the affection is slight, percussum when it is grave. Bentley on Hor. Ep. vii. 16. Ruhnken on Terent. Andr. i. 1. 98. But this distinction is not always preserved.

⁸ Domi militaque intenti, “always actively engaged, whether in peace or in war.”

⁹ Obviam ire, “to oppose, resist.” Jugur. 5. Liv. ix. 14.

² Imperium legitimum. Imperium is absolute, irresponsible authority, within certain limits of time, place, and circumstance, as that of a general over his soldiers in the field, of the consul in certain particulars, as of levying soldiers, taking the auspices, &c. Legitimum, "restricted by law."

nihil tam sequandæ libertatis esse. xxvii. 9. ea prodendi imperii Rom. tradendæ Hannibali victorie esse. Varro, de Re Rust. i. 19. ea sola que agri tuendi erunt. In all these cases the subject of the sentence conduced to, or has for its object that which is put in the genit. with the future participle; and the genitive attributes to it a certain quality, function or tendency. But where the genitive is connected with another verb than the verb substantive, causa or conclio must be supplied, like the Greek ἵκεται or χάρπιει. Thus Sallust Fr. Hist. i. 19. exercitum opprimenda libertatis habet. Liv. viii. 6. placuit averruncandas Deum iræ victimas cædi. That these are not genitives of quality (e. g. victims fit for averting divine wrath) appears from such passages as Tac. Ann. ii. 59. Germanicus Ægyptuni proficiscitur cognoscendas antiquitatis. iii. 27. multa populus paravit tuendas libertatis et firmandæ concordiae.

All these deponents had in past ages an active form; the passive use of adipiscor is preserved in the indicative and infinitive, in Plaut. Trinum. ii. 2. 28. non s̄tate verum ingenio adipiscitur sapientia. Q. Fabius Maximus, quoted by Priscian, viii. 4. 16. amitti quam apisci.

³ Labos. This form used by Sallust, according to the testimony of Servius on Æn. i. 253. Sallustius pene ubique labos potuit, quem nulla necessitas (sc. metri) coegerit.

⁴ Formidolosus, "terrible," as in Cic. pro Cluen. 3. pro leg. Man. 21; but sometimes it has a passive significance, terrified, fearful, timid; as Tac. Ann. i. 62. Terent. Eun. iv. 6. 19.

⁵ Domuerat: domare, poetice, "to level the rough and soften the hard." Virg. Æn. ix. 608. rastris terram domat. Silius, iii. 499. magna vi saxa domantem.

Here, "I calculate," that is, on precise authentic data: existimo would be "I suppose, infer, imagine."

⁶ Aliquanto, i. e. bona parte, "a good deal;" aliquantum, is not paulum, but satis multum.

But properly gens and natio refer to community of origin, populus to community of institutions. Where gens and natio are distinguished, gens has the wider signification, as Tac. Germ. 2. ita nationis nomen non gentis evaluisse.

³ Privatum ac publice, "whether they were private or public property."

⁴ Delubra, "shrines," in which votive offerings were dedicated. To rob a temple might imply only stripping it of its furniture or materials; but to rob a shrine is to carry off what has been peculiarly consecrated to the deity. Varro's derivation of the word is among the most probable: sicut locum in quo figerent candelam candelabrum appellarent, ita in quo deum ponerent nominarunt delubrum.

⁶ Animos fatigant, "shake their principles."

⁷ Ne, in the sense of nendum, which is given in many MSS., and is cited here by Priscian, "much less."

³ Cultus, “refinement,” in either a good or a bad sense; as Horace, Sat. ii. 2. 65. Mundus erit qui non offendat sordidus atque in neutram partem cultus miser. Liv. xxix. 21. de cultu ac desidia imperatoris.

⁴ In propatulo, “had no reserve about;” propatulum, “open on all

XIV. In tanta tamque corrupta civitate, Catilina, id quod factu facillimum erat, omnium flagitorum atque facinorum¹ circum se, tanquam stipatorum², catervas habebat. Nam, quicumque impudicus³, adulter, ganeo, bona patria laceraverat; qui que alienum æs grande conflaverat, quo flagitium aut facinus redimeret; præterea, omnes undique⁴ parricidæ, sacrilegi, convicti judiciis, aut pro factis judicium timentes; ad hoc, quos manus atque lingua perjurio aut sanguine civili alebat; postremo, omnes quos flagitium, egestas, conscius animus exagitabat; ii Catilinæ⁵ proximi familiaresque erant. Quod si quis etiam a culpa vacuus in amicitiam ejus inciderat⁶, quotidiano usu atque illecebris facile par similisque ceteris efficiebatur. Sed maxime adolescentium fami-rere, i. q. vacare, liberum esse ab aliqua re.

² Jam primum, "to begin then:" not with reference to the youth of Catiline, but to the narrative in hand. Comp. Tac. Ann. iv. 6; Liv. xi. 3.

⁴ Cum sacerdote Vestæ. This is said to have been Fabia, sister of Cicero's wife Terentia. Asconius, on Cicero's Oration in toga candida. She was acquitted of the charge. Cicero makes no direct mention of it, but may allude to it in the passage cited by Asconius: Quum ita viristi ut non esset locus tam sanctus quo non adventus tuus, etiam quum nulla culpa subesset, crimen afferret: on which he remarks; ita et suis pepercit et nihil levius inimico summi opprobrii turpitudinem objecit.

⁵ Alia. Without the copula, as Catil. 21. 48. 57.

⁶ Orestillæ. Probably of the family of L. Aurelius Orestes, L. f. L. n. who was consul A.U. 597. An Aufidius Orestes was consul A.U. 683.

² Quietibus. So the plural in Cicero, de Off. i. 29. somno et quietibus cæteris; though it is there used not for sleep, but for other modes of refreshing the body.

tested wills with their seals. Comp. Suet. Tib. 23.

In Italia³ nullus exercitus: Cn. Pompeius in extremis terris⁴ bellum gerebat: ipsi consulatum petenti⁵ magna spes: senatus nihil⁶ sane intentus: tutæ tranquillæque res omnes; sed ea prorsus opportuna Catilinæ.

spectare mulier scelus...ac gratuita præterita parricidia essent. For the sentiment compare Cic. de Off. ii. 24. of Cæsar, ut hoc ipsum eum delectaret, peccare, etiam si causa non esset.

¹ Quod aes alienum per omnes terras ingens erat, “because in every country there were men deeply in debt;” and therefore interested in the success of a social revolution.

³ In Italia. The republic never maintained a standing army in Italy: its legions were all occupied in the provinces. The police of Rome and the large towns was kept by the citizens themselves, and the consuls and chief magistrates had only a few lictors and archers in attendance upon them.

⁶ Nihil, “in no respect at all:” more emphatic than the simple non.

⁷ Kal. Junias, “the first of June:” A. u. 690. b. c. 64.

lare¹: hortari alios, alios tentare: opes suas, imparatam rempublicam, magna præmia conjurationis docere. Ubi satis explorata sunt, quæ voluit², in unum³ omnes convocat, quibus maxima necessitudo⁴, et plurimum audaciæ inerat. Eo convenere, senatorii ordinis, P. Lentulus Sura⁵, P. Autronius⁶, L. Cassius Longinus⁷, C. Cethegus⁸, P. et Servius Sullæ⁹, Servii filii, a connexion, but distant, of C. Cæsar the dictator, and uncle by his sister Julia, of M. Antonius the triumvir.

⁹ C. Figulo, i. e. C. Marcius Figulus: adopted into the Marcian gens, his original name being C. Minucius Thermus.

² Ubi satis explorata sunt quæ voluit, “when he had fully discovered all he wanted,” i. e. the temper and disposition of the persons he sounded. To express, “when others had discovered what he wanted,” would require qua vellet.

³ In unum, “together,” “so as to meet one another.” It is not necessary to supply locum.

⁴ Necessitudo, not “connexion” in this place, but “necessity,” “straits.” After necessitudo supply erat, which is comprehended in inerat.

Cinna and Sulla, had fulfilled their destiny, and that he was himself fated to be the third. See Plutarch, Vit. Cicer. 17. The cognomen Sura, means “an uncle.” Sulla is a diminutive of the same meaning.

⁹ P. and Serv. Cornelius Sulla were nephews of the dictator, sons of his brother Servius. Publius was absolved from the charge of conspiracy with Catiline, being defended by Cicero.

L. Vargunteius¹, Q. Annius², M. Porcius Læca³, L. Bestia⁴, Q. Curius⁵: præterea ex equestri ordine, M. Fulvius Nobilior, L. Statilius, P. Gabinius Capito, C. Cornelius: ad hoc multi ex coloniis et municipiis, domi nobiles⁶. Erant præterea complures paullo occultius consilii hujusce participes nobiles, quos magis dominationis spes hortabatur, quam inopia, aut alia necessitudo. Ceterum juventus pleraque, sed maxime nobilium, Catilinæ inceptis favebat. Quibus in otio vel magnifice, vel molliter vivere copia erat, incerta pro certis, bellum, quam pacem, malebant. Fuere item ea tempestate, qui crederent M. Licinium Crassum⁷ non ignarum ejus consilii fuisse; quia Cn.

² Q. Annius. This person is unknown; but Cicero mentions an uncle of Catiline's named L. Annius, who had been condemned judicially in the year 690.

³ M. Porcius Læca, at whose house the conspirators met, Catil. 27. Comp. Cic. pro Sull. 2. and in Catil. i. 4.

⁵ Q. Curius. Of this man see further, Catil. 23, 28. The senate voted him a reward as the discoverer of the conspiracy; but Cicero was induced to declare that it had been first disclosed to him by C. Caesar, and the reward was taken from Curius. See Suet. Vit. Jul. 17.

⁶ Domi nobiles, "noble," i. e. "distinguished by their family honours and magistracies in their native cities." At Rome a man became nobilis by serving a curule magistracy; i. e. becoming consul, prætor, ædile or censor.

⁷ M. Licinium Crassum. This Crassus belonged to a branch of the family surnamed Dives. He was himself proverbially the richest of the Romans. He was ambitious of becoming the chief of the commonwealth, and trimmed between the Marians and the senate. Finding himself outstripped in popularity and fame by Pompey, he leagued with him and Caesar, and formed an alliance which received the name of a triumvirate: which im-

Pompeius, invisus ipsi, magnum exercitum ductabat, cujusvis opes voluisse contra illius potentiam crescere; simul confisum, si conjuratio valuisset, facile apud illos principem se fore.

XVIII. Sed antea item conjuravere pauci contra rempublicam, in quibus Catilina fuit; de qua, quam verissime potero, dicam. L. Tullo, M. Lepido consulibus¹, P. Autronius et P. Sulla, legibus ambitus² interrogati³, poenas dederant. Post paullo Catilina, pecuniarum repetundarum⁴ reus, prohibitus erat consulatum petere, quod intra legitimos dies profiteri⁵ nequiverit. Erat eodem tempore Cn. Piso⁶, adolesplied an extraordinary public commission. He took the government of Syria A. u. 700, intending to make war upon the Parthians, and acquire great military resources for the furtherance of his schemes; but was slain after the fatal battle of Carrhae, A. u. 701. There is no proof of his supposed connexion with the conspiracy of Catiline.

³ Interrogati, accused, i. q. postuleatis.

⁴ Pecun. repetundarum, or simply, repetundarum, "convicted of extortion in provincial administration." Catiline had served the praetorship in Africa.

⁶ Cn. Piso. A young noble of the Calpurnian gens. He is to be distinguished from his contemporaries, 1. C. Piso, consul A. u. 687, proconsul of the Province in Gaul, where he reduced the Allobroges, a stanch supporter of the Senate; 2. C. Piso Frugi, first husband to Cicero's daughter Tullia; 3. L. Piso Cæsorinus, consul A. u. 696, when Cicero was driven into banishment, the subject of his furious invective in Pisonem: (Cæsar married his daughter Calpur-cens nobilis, summæ audaciæ, egens, factiosus, quem ad perturbandam rempublicam inopia atque mali mores stimulabant. Torquatum consules interficere; ipsi, fascibus corruptis², Pisonem cum exercitu ad obtinendas duas Hispanias³ mittere. Ea re cognita, rursus in Nonas Februarias consilium cædis transtulerant⁴. Jam tum non consulibus modo, sed plurisque senatoribus perniciem machinabantur. Quia nondum frequentes armati convenerant, ea res⁶ consilium diremit⁷.

nia); 4. M. Papius Piso Calpurnianus, a Calpurnius adopted by M. Papius; consul A.U. 693.

² Fascibus corruptis, “seizing the fasces,” i.e. the consular power, which they represented.

³ Duas Hispanias. At this time Spain was divided into two provinces, the Hither and the Further, afterwards Tarraconensis and Baetica. The former extended from the Pyrenees to the Sinus Urcitanus, (modern Almeria,) on the south, to Gallæcia and the mouth of the Douro on the west; the latter was supposed to comprehend the rest of the peninsula, but beyond the Guadiana the country was only partially subdued till the prætorship of Cæsar, A.U. 694. Between the Guadiana and the Douro a third province was afterwards formed called Lusitania.

⁶ Ea res, i.e. his having given the signal too soon.

XIX. Postea Piso in citeriorem Hispaniam quæstor pro prætore¹ missus est, adnitente² Crasso, quod eum infestum inimicum³ Cn. Pompeio cognoverat. Neque tamen senatus provinciam invitus dederat: quippe fœdum hominem a republica procul esse volebat: simul⁴, quia boni complures⁵ præsidium in eo putabant: et jam tum potentia Cn. Pompeii formidolosa erat. Sed is Piso, in provincia ab equitibus Hispanis⁶,

³ Infestum inimicum, “a bitter personal enemy.” The former word is omitted in several MSS. as apparently redundant.

⁴ Simul. Sallust frequently uses this copulative to connect a second less important reason with the principal reason already given. Comp. Catil. 16, 17, 20, 56, and Jugur. 4. cuius de virtute quia multi dixerunt prætereundum puto, simul ne per insolentiam quis existimet memet studium meum laudando extollere.

Pompeii veteres fidosque ³clientes⁴, voluntate ejus Pisonem adgressos; numquam Hispanos præterea tale facinus fecisse, sed imperia sæva multa antea perpessos. Nos eam rem in medio relinquemus. De superiore conjuratione satis dictum.

¹ Iter faciens, “on a march;” not, on his way into the country, where he had already arrived, as appears from Dion and Asconius.

² Sunt qui ita dicunt. Some read dicant. The distinction, if correctly observed, comes to this, Sunt qui dicunt; there are some, I know, who say, Sunt qui dicant; some, perhaps, may be found who say.

³ Cnei Pompeii veteres fidosque clientes. An accidental hexameter. Many such have been discovered in the Latin prose-writers. Comp. Jugur. 5. Bellum scripturum sum quod populus Romanus. Tac. Ann. i. 1. Urbem Romam a principio reges habuere. Germ. 39. Sylvam auguris patrum et prisca formidine sacram. Quintilian has remarked, Inst. Orat.

ix. 4, that Livy's preface begins with a portion of an hexameter: Facturuane operæ pretium sin. Drakenborch, on this passage, collects similar instances. See Liv. vii. 11, 13, 14; xxi. 9; xxii. 50; xxiii. 18.

⁵ In rem fore, “to the purpose,” “advantageous.” In the same sense ob rem, Jugur. 31; and ex re, Terent. Phorm. v. 7, 76.

⁶ Universos, “the whole number collectively.”

vestra spectata mihi forent, nequidquam opportuna res cecidisset¹; spes magna, dominatio, in manibus frustra fuissent: neque ego per ignaviam², aut vana ingenia, incerta pro certis captarem. ¹ Res cecidisset. Metaph. from the fall of dice.

² Per ignaviam, etc., "by means of," "through the instrumentality of." Comp. below, emori per virtutem, vitam per dedecus amittere. Catil. 12. per summum scelus omnia sociis adimere. 42. inconsultè ac velut per dementiam agere.

³ Tempestatibus, "seasons of peril or trouble." Tempestas, in its primary sense, is "a period of time," opposed to tempus, "a moment of time." Hence it is sometimes used for a favourable or fitting season, as Cic. ad Div. xiv. 4. Si esset licitum per nauatas qui tempestatem prætermittere nolebant. But more commonly for an unfavourable or perilous season.

⁴ Incipere, "to undertake."

⁶ Ea demum, "that after all."

⁷ Diversi, "separately."

⁸ Concessit in, "has fallen under."

Nonne emori per virtutem præstat, quam vitam miseram atque dishonestam, ubi alienæ superbiæ ludibrio fueris, per dedecus amittere? Verum enim vero, pro deum atque hominum fidem! victoria in manu nobis est: viget ætas, animus valet: contra illis, annis atque divitiis, omnia consenuerunt⁵. title. It has been remarked that the word tetrarche is generally found in combination with reges. Comp. Sall. Fr. Hist. iv. 26. tetrarchas regesque territorum animi firmavit. Cic. pro Mil. 28. omittit socios, exteris nationes, regem tetrarchas. In Vatin. 12. foedare cum civitatibus, cum regibus, cum tetrarchis. ² Sine gratia, sine auctoritate, "without interest or influence."

³ His obnoxii, "under obligation to them," and therefore "at their mercy." Comp. Catil. 48. plerique Crasso ex negotiis privatis obnoxii.

² In exstruendo mari et montibus coæquandis, "in raising seas and levelling mountains," i. e. excavating fish-ponds on shore, and cutting through land to admit the water of the sea. Comp. above, c. 13. subversos montes, maria constructa.

³ Continuare, i. q. domos domibus adjicere, "to join two or more houses together." Comp. Liv. xxxiv. 4. ingenus cupidus agros continuandi. Tac. Ann. xv. 39. domo palatium et hortos continuare.

⁴ Larem familiarem, "a domestic genius," or "family divinity;" implying "a home."

neque corpus a vobis aberit. Hæc ipsa, ut spero, vobiscum una consul agam; nisi forte animus fallit, et vos servire, quam imperare, parati estis."

XXI. Tum Catilina polliceri tabulas novas⁵, proscriptionem⁶ locupletium, magistratus, sacerdotia, rapinas, alia omnia quæ bellum atque lubido victorum fert⁷. ¹ Quieta movere, i. q. turbare. Comp. Tac. Ann. iii. 30. mota Africa. Imitated by Ammianus Marcellinus, xv. 5. composita turbare; quieta perturbare.

² Merces, "reward," "gain;" frequently in a bad sense.

³ Conditio belli, "condition, or terms on which they were to engage." Conditio means, 1 state of life, rank, position; 2 agreement, pact; 3 the thing about which an agreement is made, e. g. a marriage.

⁴ Quid ubique. This may be explained quid opis, et ubi id haberet. Comp. 47. quid aut qua de causa consili habuisset.

⁵ Tabulas novas, "fresh tablets," i. e. an abolition of debts. The metaphor is taken from the use of waxed tablets for scoring accounts. When the account was cleared, by payment or otherwise, the wax might be smoothed with the blunt end of the stylus, in readiness to begin a new score.

⁶ Proscriptionem; a placard by which notice is publicly given of a sale, &c. Ulpian, in the Digest, gives the name to the announcement over a shop: Proscribere palam sic accipimus, claris literis ut de piano rectè legi possint, ante tabernam scilicet, vel ante eum locum, in quo negotiatio exerceatur, nec in loco remoto, sed in evidenti. Hence the proclamation by which the lives or properties of citizens were declared forfeited were called proscriptions. Sulla was the first to placard tabulas proscriptionis. Afterwards the second triumvirate, Antonius, Lepidus, and Octavius.

cera) a city of Campania. He had fled to Mauretania to escape an accusation at Rome, and maintained himself in distinction there by siding alternately with the petty chiefs of the country in their intestine feuds. He took Cæsar's side after the battle of Thapsus, and intercepted Scipio and other fugitives of the senatorial party. Cæsar made him a grant of territory from the possessions of Juba king of Numidia, where he was ultimately killed in a quarrel with a native chief.

² Omnibus necessitudinibus circumventum, "distressed by exigencies of various kinds."

³ Prædæ fuerat, "had been an occasion of booty, illegitimate gain." Comp. c. 48. nam alia belli facinora prædæ magis quam detimento fore.

⁴ Petitionem, "suit for the consulship."

Non nulli facta et hæc, et multa præterea, existimabant, ab his, qui Ciceronis invidiam⁴, quæ postea orta est, leniri credebant atrocitate sceleris eorum, qui poenas dederant. Nobis ea res pro magnitudine⁵ parum comperta est.

XXIII. Sed in ea conjuratione fuit Q. Curius natus haud obscuro loco, flagitiis atque facinoribus coopertus⁶; quem censores senatu, probri gratia

¹ Humani corporis sanguinem. The redundant expression seems intended for emphasis. This ceremony is mentioned by the historians, Florus, iv. 1; Dion Cass. xxxvii. 20, who adds that a boy was slain for the purpose. But the custom of ratifying an oath by drawing blood from the body and drinking it existed among the Scythians and Dacians, and was probably in this case a remnant of an old Italian superstition. The Christian apologists pointed with triumph to this horrid rite. Minucius, Octav. 30. et quod Saturni filio dignum est...ipsum credo docuisse sanguinis fœdere conjurare Catilinam. Cicero may possibly allude to it in Catil. 1. sica, quæ quidem quibus abs te initia sacris et devota sit...; but Sallust himself insinuates that it was at least unknown to Cicero. Perhaps it was a single drop of blood mixed in a bowl of wine to preserve the shadow of an antique ceremonial.

² Aitque eo, dictitare, fecisse quo, “and they went on to say, he did so in order that,” &c. Dictitare. The historic infin.; the subject being the same as to fuere qui dicerent. Eo...quo, “in order that.”

³ Alius alii...conscii. The dat. ; as in the construction, conscire sibi. Terent. Heaut. i. 1. 69. qui fuere ei concisi. Tac. Ann. i. 43. flagitorum exercitui meo conscius.

⁴ Ciceronis invidiam, passivè, “the odium against Cicero,” when he was afterwards accused by the tribune Clodius of getting Roman citizens punished with death without an appeal to the people.

⁶ Cooperitus, “overwhelmed.” We say, “covered with infamy,” or “with moverant¹. Huic homini non minor vanitas, quam audacia: neque reticere, quæ audierat, neque suamet² ipse scelera occultare: prorsus³ neque dicere, neque facere⁴, quidquam pensi habebat. Erat ei cum Fulvia, muliere nobili, vetus consuetudo⁵: cui cum minus gratus esset, quia inopia minus largiri poterat, repente glorians maria montesque⁶ polliceri cœpit; minari interdum ferro, nisi obnoxia⁷ foret; postremo ferocius agitare, quam solitus erat. At Fulvia, insolentia⁸ Curii caussa cognita, tale periculum reipublicæ haud occultum habuit⁹; sed, sublato auctore¹⁰, de Ca-ridicule:" the Romans applied the metaphor to the deeds themselves, as Cic. in Ver. i. 4. sceleribus coopertum. Liv. xxxix. 15. cooperti stupris. Horace's use of the phrase approaches nearly to ours: Sat. ii. 1. 68. Famosissime Lupus coopertus versibus.

³ Prorsus, "in short." See note on c. 15.

⁴ Negue dicere negue facere, etc. "reckless in every thing he said or did:" not merely careless, but wanton and desperate: as Vell. ii. 95. Clodius qui neque dicendi neque fa-ciendi ullum nisi quem vellet nosset modum. Compare the same phrase in Liv. xxvi. 15.

⁵ Stupri consuetudo, "criminal intimacy." The verb consuescere is always used, absolutè, in a bad sense, but the noun is indifferent: hence stupri is required here to complete the sense.

⁷ Obnoxia, scil. amori, affectui: as Tac. Ann. vi. 6: i. q. morigera, "obedient." So in Seneca, obnoxius domino.

⁸ Insolentia, "unusual audacity." Comp. Hor. Epod. 16. extr. Mesque terra cedat insolentia.

¹⁰ Sublato auctore, "leaving out

² Invidia, activè, "with prejudice against Cicero."

³ Æstuabat...credebant. Observe the sing. and plur. both connected with the noun of number; and comp. Tac. Ann. ii. 24. ut quis ex longinquo advenerat miracula narrabant.

⁵ Homo novus, "a new man;" a term of disparagement applied to candidates for public office, whose families were not ennobled by having attained any of the curule magistracies. Plutarch, Cat. Min. οἱ ἀπὸ γένους δόξαν οὐκ ἔχοντες, ἀρχόμενοι δὲ γυναικεῖσθαι δι' αὐτῶν. Cicero frequently refers to his own want of nobility, and to the slur it entailed upon him, as Phil. vi. 6. quid enim non debeo vobis, Quirites, quem vos, a se ortum, hominibus nobilissimis omnibus honoribus præstulisti. Comp. the celebrated panegyric upon him in Juvenal, viii. 226:

Hic novus Arpinas ignobilis et modo

Municipalis eques.

⁶ Post fuere, "were postponed." The words should be written separately, as in Catil. 53. ante Romanos fuisse.

⁸ Populares conjurationis, "the associates in the plot;" popularis has Catilinæ furor minuebatur : sed in dies plura agitare ; arma per Italiam locis opportunis parare ; pecuniam, sua aut amicorum fide sumptam mutuam¹, Fæsulas² ad Manlium quemdam portare, qui postea princeps³ fuit belli faciendi. no bad sense, and should not be rendered by "accomplices." See above, c. 22.

² Fæsulae ; the modern Fiesole, an ancient Etruscan city on a hill, two miles to the north of the modern Florence.

⁴ Sumptus ... toleraverant, "had met, though with difficulty, their lavish expenditure by, &c."

⁵ Modum fecerat : i. q. finem attulera, "had put an end to."

⁶ Servitia, "slaves." The abstract for the concrete.

⁷ Virilis audacie. Comp. Vell. i. 1. virilis animi foemina. Flor. iv. 5. virilis militiæ uxor.

⁸ Viro : scil. Decimus Junius Brutus (see Catil. 40); he had been consul A.U. 677.

⁹ Liberis. One of her sons was M. Junius Brutus Albinus, legatus to Julius Cæsar in Gaul, and afterwards one of his assassins.

¹⁰ Docta. Observe the triple construction, with the abl., the infin., and the accus. : unless psallere, multa alia (facere), depend upon solebat, or some such verb understood. Compare posse versus facere, below.

psallere, saltare¹ elegantius, quam necesse est probae²; multa alia, quæ instrumenta luxuriæ³ sunt. Sed ei cariora semper omnia, quam decus⁴ atque pudicitia fuit⁵: pecuniae an famæ minus parceret, haud facile discerneres; lubidine sic accensa⁶ ut sæpius peteret⁷ viros quam peteretur. Sed ea sæpe antehac fidem prodiderat, creditum abjuraverat⁸, cædis consilia

¹ Psallere et saltare. Some MSS. read also canere or cantare. Psallere is to sing to the lyre, canere to sing simply.

² Elegantius, quam necesse est probæ. The ancient Romans regarded dancing and singing as accomplishments exhibited for the entertainment of others. Hence they were always connected in their minds with servile or histrionic performances. The fashion of dancing for amusement, or to contribute to social festivity among themselves, was learnt at a later period from the Greeks. In the last century of the republic, some of the most distinguished senators were noted for their excellence in dancing, but not without exciting much contempt from grave censors. (See Macrob. Saturn. ii. 10): and Horace stigmatizes the fashion of teaching young women the soft Ionian dances. Motus doceri gaudet Ionicos matura virgo, et fingitur artibus. Od. iii. 6. 26. Sallust by the word necesse seems to admit that the practice was tolerated in his time, but regarded with jealousy. Probæ: i.q. pudicæ. Hor. Epod. 17. 40. tu pudica, tu proba. Sall. Fr. Hist. oris probi, animi inverecundi.

³ Instrumenta luxuriæ, "the means of corruption," or "vice."

Comp. Jugur. 4. decus atque libertatem gratificari.

⁵ Fuit. Many MSS. read fuerit; which is an attempt to correct a supposed incorrectness in the construction of the sense. The sing. fuit is defended by Jugur. 18. ea loca quæ proxime Carthaginem Numidia appellatur, not appellantur. Ovid, Art. Am. iii. 222. Quas geritis vestes sordida lana fuit.

⁷ Peteret, "courted." Comp. Propert. ii. 16. 27. Quum te jam multi peterent, tu me una petisti. Senec. Medea, 218. petebant tunc meos thalamos proci. Qui nunc petuntur.

⁸ Creditum abjuraverat, "had forsworn a trust." Among the Romans, the absence of facilities for bartering and exchange rendered it necessary to keep hoards of gold and silver, and these it was often requisite to entrust to the care of friends. The facility of breaking such engagements caused their faithful fulfilment to be regarded as an eminent virtue. Comp. Juvenal. xiii. 60:

Nunc si depositum non infitietur amicus, fuerat, luxuria atque inopia præceps abierat¹. Verum ingenium ejus haud absurdum²: posse³ versus facere, jocum movere⁴, sermone uti vel modesto, vel molli, vel procaci⁵: prorsus multæ facetiæ multusque lepos⁶ inerat.

XXVI. His rebus comparatis, Catilina nihilo minus⁷ in proximum annum consulatum petebat; sperans, si desiguatus foret, facile se ex voluntate Antonio usurum. Neque interea quietus erat, sed

Si reddit veterem cum tota ærugine follem,
Prodigiosa fides et Tuscis digna libellis,
Quæque coronata lustrari debeat agna.

¹ Præceps abierat: a combination of two phrases; præceps ire, "to fall headlong;" but abire, "to stray from the right path." A man is said in alia omnia abire, who digresses from the subject under discussion. Abire is also connected with præceps in its ordinary sense in Livy, xli. 10. præceps in provinciam abiit.

² Haud absurdum, "not contemptible." Comp. Tac. Ann. xiii. 45. of Poppæa, the wife of Nero, a passage evidently imitated from this: sermo comis, nec absurdum ingenium: modestiam præferre et lascivia uti; rarus in publicum egressus, idque velata parte oris. Absurdus means properly, "foolish," "not understanding," perhaps from sardare, which Festus explains by intelligere. So from saltare, exsulto, &c.

³ Posse. Supply inerat, or some similar verb, which the writer omits in order to pass abruptly to the summing up of the whole character: prorsus...inerat.

⁴ Jocum movere, "to raise a laugh." Comp. Hor. Epist. i. 19. 19.

O imitatores, servum pecus, ut mihi sæpe Bilem, sæpe jocum vestri movere tumultus. So, stomachum, fletum alicui movere, "to cause anger, draw tears," &c.

⁵ Velmolli, vel procaci. Both words of bad signification, the latter the stronger of the two, "either amatory or meretricious." Indeed Cicero says, pro Celio, 20. ut non solum meretrix sed etiam procax videretur.

⁶ Facetiæ...lepos, "wit and grace."

omnibus modis insidias parabat Ciceroni. Neque illi tamen ad cavendum dolus, aut astutiae¹ deerant. Namque, a principio consulatus sui, multa pollicendo per Fulviam, effecerat, ut Q. Curius, de quo paullo ante memoravi, consilia Catilinæ sibi proderet. Ad hoc², collegam suum Antonium pactione provinciæ³ perpulerat, ne contra rempublicam sentiret; circum se præsidia amicorum atque clientium occulte habebat. Postquam dies comitiorum venit, et Catilinæ neque petitio, neque insidiæ quas consuli in campo⁴ fecerat, prospere cessere; constituit bellum facere, et extrema omnia experiri, quoniam quæ occulte tentaverat, aspera fedaque evenerant⁵.

³ Pactione provinciæ. The consuls generally chose by lot between the provinces of the Cisalpine Gaul and Macedonia. The former was important from its proximity to the city, but the latter more attractive from its greater extent and wealth. Cicero, having obtained Macedonia, transferred it to his colleague, which was considered an act of great generosity. But Cicero did not intend to take a province at all: he preferred remaining in the city, where his engagements as an advocate ensured him riches and consideration. Antonius eventually succeeded to the province of Macedonia, which he governed for two years, and was recalled and impeached for extortion, and also charged with complicity with Catiline. He was defended by Cicero, but condemned and banished.

⁴ In campo, "in the campus Martius," where the election was held. This attempt is referred to by Cicero, in Catil. i. 5, where he says that Catiline sought to kill not only him, as actual consul, but also the competitors for the ensuing consulsiphip.

² Picenum, a district between the Apennines and the Adriatic, from the river Aternus on the south to the Æs on the north.

³ C. Julium. About this Julius nothing more is known: he was probably not a Caesar. The Julian gens was already widely spread by clientage.

⁴ Apuliam. A region south-east of Picenum, bordering on the Adriatic, and extending to the Lapygian promontory, the eastern extremity of Italy.

⁵ Quem ubique. See notes on c. 21, and 23.

⁶ Cum telo esse, “to wear arms:” forbidden by the Twelve Tables, and by later laws. It became however common in these times, and was again prohibited by a law of Pompeius in his sole consulship, A.U. 702. The conspirators who murdered Cesar carried daggers in the case which belonged to the stylus. Cum telo esse is the ‘antique formula.’ Cic. pro Milon. 4. ipsa lex esse cum telo homini occidendi causa vetat. Comp. in Catil. i. 6; and the phrases esse cum toga, cum imperio.

⁷ Jubere, i. e. cum telo esse.

⁸ Festinare, “he was busy.”

⁹ Intempesta nocte, “late at night.” Servius, in Virg. Æn. iii. 587, explains this phrase, nox intempesta dicta est media, tanquam inactuosa; “unseasonable for action.” Macrobius, Sat. i. 3. non idonea rebus gerendis.

says simply, Mane salutantes; but Juvenal, Sideribus dubiis aut illo tempore quo se Frigida circumagunt pigris sarracis Bootæ. Symmachus in the 4th century speaks of keeping awake all night for the purpose: Nondum ante januam eminentium potestatum vigilem noctem salutator expertus es. Epist. viii.

³ Janua prohibiti. Comp. Jugur. Numidas insequentes moenibus prohibuit: "kept out of the city by the walls."

² Ancipiⁱti malo, “the double calamity;” i.e. the plot within the city, and the insurrection in Etruria, &c. Comp. Jugur. 67. neque caveri anceps malum posse.

³ Rem ad Senatum refert: a technical phrase; “he moves a resolution in the senate concerning the affair;” the more usual form being referre de aliqua re ad Sen., with the same meaning. Comp. a third form, Catil. 50. Consul convocato Senatu refert quid de his fieri placeat qui in custodiā traditi erant: “submits a resolution to the pleasure of the Senate.”

This was a. d. xii. Kal. Nov. Cic. in Catil. i. 3. meministine me ante diem xii. Kal. Nov. dicere in Senatu certo die fore in armis qui dies futurus esset a. d. viii. Kal. Novembres? The decree which followed was given on xi. Kal. Nov. = 22 Oct. 691 = 26 Dec. 63 B.C., as appears from the notice of Asconius, who says that the first oration against Catiline was delivered, cum octavus decimus dies esset postquam factum est Senatus consultum, etc. The Orat. in Catil. 1. was delivered on vi. Id. Nov. = 8 Nov. 691 = 12 Jan. 62 B.C. See Fischer's Römische Zeittäfeln. This, it will be seen, was some days before the meeting in Porcius Læca's house, and the attempt to murder the consul.

⁴ Solet: absol. for fieri solet: as Catil. 30. Jugur. 15. 25. 66.

XXX. Post paucos dies L. Sænius, senator, in senatu litteras recitavit, quas Fæsulis adlatas sibi dicebat; in quibus scriptum erat, C. Manlium arma cepisse, cum magna multitudine, ante diem vi. Kalendas Novembbris. Simul, id quod in tali re solet, alii portenta atque prodigia nunciabant; alii conventus fieri, arma portari⁴, Capuae atque in Apulia servile bel-

¹ Ea potestas...maxima etc. Observe the place which maxima holds in this sentence, removed from its substantive, and give it a pregnant sense: "This power, which is paramount to all, the Roman law allows the senate to confer upon the magistrate: the power, namely, of raising an army, &c." Such a decree was denominated Senatus consultum ultimum. This was equivalent to giving the consuls dictatorial power, and was far more convenient to the nobles than creating a dictator, which they had not ventured to do for 150 years, except in the case of Sulla.

² Domi militiaeque. Ordinarily the consul exercised no military imperium within the city, but only in the camp: on these occasions the imperium was added to the judicium or jus juris dicendi, within the city also, i. e. the city was put under military law.

is: "except in the case of the senate using its prerogative to issue its ultimate decree, the consul has no jus of any kind, either separate or conjoined, but what he derives from the appointment of the people." The phrase populi jussus is equivocal. Properly it means the decree of the curies, by which, in early times, the imperium was conferred upon the kings, and after the establishment of the republic, upon the consuls, posterior to their election by the centuries. In process of time this became a mere form. But the phrase may be used loosely for the election itself, by which the consul became virtually invested with the jus juris dicendi, and jus imperandi beyond the walls. Sallust means perhaps to reserve to the people the right of extending this jus in extreme cases to paramount authority within the city; which however they never ventured to claim, though they strongly objected to its exercise by the senate.

⁴ Arma portari. Gaius distinguishes ferre, portare and agere: Ferri lum moveri. Igitur, senati decreto¹, Q. Marcius Rex² Fæsulas, Q. Metellus Creticus³ in Apuliam circumque loca⁴, missi: hi utriusque⁵ ad urbem imperatores⁶ erant; impediti, ne triumpharent, calumnia⁷ paucorum, quibus omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat. Sed prætores, Q. Pompeius Rufus⁸ Capropriè dicimus quæ quis suo corpore bejusat, portari ea quæ quis in jumento secum ducit, agi ea quæ animalia sunt: portare is also emphatic or poetic for ferre.

¹ Senati decreto. This ancient form of the genitive is sanctioned by Nonius, viii. 10; and Donatus on Terence Andr. ii. 2. 28. notices that Sallust used it. Tumulti also occurs. Catil. 59.

² Q. Marcius Rex: consul with L. Cæcilius Metellus, A.U. 686, and afterwards proconsul in Cilicia. Cicero praises his courage and military skill, in Pison. 23. Ab Anco Marcio sunt Marci Reges. Suet. Cal. 6. Marcius and Martius are probably the same words, as Porcius, Accius, nunciua, etc., are written indifferently Portius, Attius, nuntius. This common substitution of c for t shews that t before i was pronounced soft.

³ Q. Metellus Creticus: consul with L. Hortensius A.U. 685: he subdued Crete as proconsul.

⁴ Circumque loca, “the neighbouring regions:” circum and circa are thus used absolutely for quæ circ. sunt, very commonly in Livy. See ix. 11; xxiv. 3. The MSS. read circumque ea loca, and the emendation is due to Cortius, who saw that the reading must have arisen from the transcribers’ ignorance of the idiom. Ea, meaning Apulia, would make the passage absurd. Loca is governed by in.

⁵ Hi utriusque, for the more correct form, horum uterque. So Catil. 5. quæ utraque. Tac. Ann. xvi. 11. pater filiam, avia neptem, illa utrosque intuens, for utrumque.

⁶ Ad urbem imperatores. These words are to be connected together: generals returned from their provinces, and waiting outside the walls for the day of their triumph, before which they were not allowed to enter the city; or who, having received the imperium, had not yet completed their levies. Asconius explains the phrase, Act. in Verr. i. 15. sic dici solet de iis qui cum potestate provinciali aut nuper a provincia revertissent, aut non dum in provinciam profecti essent.

puam, Q. Metellus Celer¹ in agrum Picenum; hisque permissum², "uti pro tempore atque periculo exercitum compararent." Ad hoc, "si quis indicavisset de conjuratione, quæ contra rem publicam facta erat, præmium servo libertatem et sestertia centum³; libero impunitatem ejus rei, et sestertia ducenta;" itemque decrevere, "uti gladiatoriæ familie⁴ Capuam affair of Catiline, he obtained the proconsular government of Africa. There were two families belonging to the gens Pompeia, distinguished by the surnames Rufus and Strabo. Cn. Pompeius Magnus was son of Cn. Pompeius Strabo. The prænomens of the Rufi, so far as they are known to us, were Aulus and Quintus; those of the Strabones, Cnaeus and Sextus.

¹ Q. Metellus Celer: of the gens Cæcilia, one of the most numerous and widely ramified of the great Roman houses. One great branch of it bore the surname Metellus; but this family again was subdivided, and its various offsets were distinguished by additional surnames; such as Pius, Nepos and Celer. Metellus Celer and Metellus Nepos were brothers, both sons of a Nepos. A story is told by Plutarch, that this Celer received his surname for the celerity with which he provided a show of gladiators for the solemnity of his father's funeral. But the surname Celer was borne by another Metellus before him, by whom he was probably adopted. The prætor Celer became afterwards consul, A.U. 694.

² Permissum, "authority was given." Comp. Cic. in Catil. i. 2. senatusconsulto consulibus permissa res-publica, "put in charge of the consuls." Lucan. i. 595. Pontifices sacri quibus est permissa potestas.

³ Sestertia centum, "one hundred sestertia," i.e. "one hundred thousand sestertii (sesterces)." The sestertius was a Roman coin, one fourth of the denarius (10 asses), and therefore equal to $2\frac{1}{2}$ asses. Hence the name, which is an abbreviation of semis tertius (scil. nummus); i.e. 1 an as, 2 an as, and 3 a half as. "Hence the symbol HS or IIS, which is used to designate the sestertius. It stands for either LLS (Libra Libra et Semis) or for IIS, the two I's merely forming the numeral two (scil. asses or librae), and the whole being, in either case, equivalent to dupondius et semis."

"The value of the sestertius up to the time } = £ s. d. f.

After Augustus,
the sestertius = 0 0 1 3 5
the sestertium = 7 16 3."

See Smith's Dictionary of Gr. and Rom. Antiquities.

⁴ Gladiatoriæ familiae, "troops of gladiators." It was a commercial speculation to maintain a number of swordsmen, trained in schools (Iudi) by masters of the art (Ianiste), and to let these out to the magistrates for public shows. The gladiators were at et in cetera municipia distribuerentur, pro cuiusque opibus; Romæ per totam urbem vigiliæ haberentur, iisque minores magistratus¹ præessent."

XXXI. Quibus rebus permota civitas, atque immutata urbis facies erat: ex summa lætitia atque lascivia, quæ diurna quies pepererat, repente omnes tristitia invasit: festinare, trepidare; neque loco, nec homini cuiquam satis credere; neque bellum gerere neque pacem habere; suo quisque metu pericula metiri. Ad hoc mulieres, quibus, reipublicæ magnitudine², belli timor insolitus incesserat³, afflictare⁴ sese; manus supplices ad cœlum tendere; miserari⁵ parvos first captives or criminals; but persons were found to offer themselves voluntarily for pay; and it became usual to affix a period (three years) for their service; after which, if they survived, they received a staff (rude donati) in token of their discharge. The large numbers of these gladiators collected, particularly at Capua, became an object of alarm to the government in times of disturbance. On this occasion their schools were dispersed in various towns as a measure of precaution.

1 Minores magistratus. The ædiles, quæstors and triumvirs, appointed for various purposes. The inferior magistrates were elected by the comitia tributa, the superior by the centuriata. Aul. Gell. xiii. 15. The tribunes of the people were not strictly magistrates. The establishment of the watch is mentioned by Cicero, in Catil. i. 1. Augustus first instituted a regular police, cohors vigilum, in Rome.

2 Reipublicæ magnitudine, "from the greatness of the Republic," the ablat. of the cause, i. q. propter reip. magnitudinem. Comp. Jugur. 42. Gracchis cupidine victoria hand satis moderatus animus fuit.

3 Incesserat, omitted without reason in most editions on account of the dat. quibus. But comp. Ces. B. C. iii. 74. exercitui Cæsaris tantus incessit dolor. Liy. iv. 57. cura patribus incessit. Tac. Ann. iii. 36. incedebat enim deterrimo cuique licentia. Cicero, ad Div. xvi. 12, says, mirus invaserat furor improbia. Translate: "assailed by fear of war, to which from the greatness of the republic they had long been unaccustomed."

4 Afflictare: properly, "to dash against," as of ships driven on shore, the conflict of armies, &c.; but it does not seem to occur in the sense of plangere or prosternere, as an act of lamentation. Construe it metaphorically, "were afflicted," "distressed."

5 Miserari, "lamented over." Misereri, "to feel compassion in the mind;” miserari, “to express compassion.”

⁶ Jurgio, “a frivolous and malicious charge.”

edidit¹. Sed, ubi ille adsedit, Catilina, ut erat paratus ad dissimulanda² omnia, demisso vultu, voce supplici postulare, “Patres conscripti ne quid de se temere crederent; ea familia ortum, ita ab adolescentia vitam instituisse, ut omnia bona in spe haberet: ne aestimarent, sibi patricio homini, cuius ipsius atque majorum plurima beneficia in plebem Romanam essent, perdita republica opus esse, cum eam servaret M. Tullius, inquilinus civis³ urbis Romæ.” Ad hoc male-dicta alia cum adderet, obstrepere omnes, hostem atque parricidam⁴ vocare. Tum ille furibundus: “Quoniam quidem circumventus,” inquit, “ab inimicis præceps agor, incendium meum ruina restinguam⁵.”

XXXII. Dein se ex curia domum proripuit;

¹ Quam postea scriptam edidit. Sallust does not pretend to give Cicero's speeches, because they were published by himself.

² Ut erat paratus ad dissimulanda, i. q. pro dissimulatione sua. Comp. Jugur. 7. Jugurtha ut erat impigro atque acri ingenio.

⁴ Parricidam, “unnatural murderer.” This epithet is applied to any monstrous criminal: as Catil. 14. omnes undique parricidae, sacrilegi, convicti judiciis. But more particularly to traitors against the state, slayers of their country. Cic. in Catil. i. 7. Te patria odit ac metuit, ac jam diu te nihil judicat nisi de parricidio suo cogitare. Comp. Tac. Hist. i. 85. Hostem et parricidam Vitellium vocantes.

multa secum ipse volvens; quod neque insidiæ consuli procedebant¹, et ab incendio intelligebat urbem vigilis munitam, optimum factum² credens, exercitum augere, ac prius, quam legiones scriberentur, antecapere quæ bello usui forent; nocte intempesta³ cum paucis in Manliana castra profectus est. Sed Cethego atque Lentulo, ceterisque quorum cognoverat promptam audaciam, mandat, quibus rebus possent, opes factionis confirmant, insidias consuli maturent, cædem incendia, aliaque belli facinora parent: sese prope diem⁴ cum magno exercitu ad urbem accessurum⁵. Dum hæc Romæ geruntur, C. Manlius ex suo numero⁶ ad Marcium Regem mittit, cum mandatis⁷ hujuscemodi:

² Optimum factum; simply, “the best thing;” factu, which many MSS. read, would express more fully, “the best thing to be done.” So bonum factum, “good!” Comp. Suet. Jul. Bonum factum: ne quis Senator novo curiam monstrare velit. It was a common heading for proclamations. Plaut. Pæn. prolog. Bonum factum; edicta ut servetis mea.

³ Nocte intempesta, “at dead of night.” This was the night of the 8th—9th of November, A.U. 691 = 12 Jan. B.C. 62. Cicero delivered the second Catilinarian, postridie quam Catilina profugit, v. Id. Nov. = 9

tions.” The command refers to the person charged to deliver the message, not to the person to whom the message is to be delivered.

³ Lege uti, “to have the benefit of the law.” The laws of the XII tables fixed the highest rate of interest at $\frac{1}{12}$ th per ann. of the sum borrowed, = $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. This was called unciarium fenus, the uncia being $\frac{1}{12}$ th of the as. This was reduced to one half by the consuls Manlius and Plautius, A.U. 407. Liv. vii. 27. These enactments were generally disregarded: in the time of Horace money could fetch as much as 5 per cent. per month. See Sat. i. 2. 14. Quinas hic capitii mercedes execusat. Comp. Tac. Ann. vi. 16. But the passage in the text refers more particularly to the lex Pætelia Papiria, A.U. 428. by which imprisonment for debt was forbidden. See Liv. viii. 28. At an earlier period the creditor had power not only to confine his debtor, but to sell him into slavery. Aulus Gellius, xx. 1, cites a law of the XII tables which enacted that if there were more creditors than one they might cut up the debtor's body in due proportion: partes secanto: si plus minusve secuerunt se fraude esto. Gellius understood this law literally, and it has generally been interpreted accordingly. Some, however, maintain that the sectio refers only to a division of the debtor's effects. Perhaps it was a rude way of expressing the idea of strict retribution, like the provisions of the Mahometan law of retaliation, not meant to be actually enforced.

⁴ Atque prætoris. The prætor urbanus was the principal judge in all civil processes, and the poor debtors complained that he favoured their wealthier creditors. In the edictum which he issued on assuming his office he declared the principles on which he should administer justice, and frequently trench'd upon the provisions of actual law.

⁵ Vestrūm. The passage was thus suis inopiæ opitulati sunt: ac novissime, memoria nostra, propter magnitudinem æris alieni, volentibus omnibus bonis¹, argentum ære solutum est². Sæpe ipsa plebes, aut dominandi studio permota, aut superbia magistratum, armata a patribus secessit³. At nos non imperium neque divitias petimus, quarum rerum caussa bella atque certamina omnia inter mortales sunt: sed libertatem, quam nemo bonus, nisi cum anima simul, amittit⁴. Te atque senatum obtestamur, consulatis miseris civibus; legis præsidium, quod iniquitas prætoris eripuit, restituatis: neve eam nobis necessitudinem imponatis, ut quæramus, quoniam modo⁵ ulti maxime sanguinem nostrum pereamus.

read by A. Gellius (xx. 6), though many MSS. give vestri. Observe that nostrī, vestri are genitives sing. of the possessives noster, vester, not genitives plural of nos, vos, as the grammars for the most part assert. In partition nostrum must be used, as primus nostrum, multi nostrum, not nostrī. On the other hand, amor nostrī, where being or condition, negotii, may be understood. So where nos is the subject, pars nostrum amat: but vivas memor nostri, noster being the object.

² Argentum ære solutum est. The silver coin, the sestertius, was paid with the brass coin, the as. This refers to an adjustment of debts made by the government in the year u.c. 668, when obligations were cancelled by the payment of one-fourth of the amount (quadrante capitii, Vell. ii. 23.) The sestertius (i. e. semistertius) originally = $2\frac{1}{2}$ asses; but after the second Punic war it was made = 4 asses. See Plin. Hist. Nat. xxxiii. 13. Hannibale urgente, Q. Fabio Maximo dictatore asses unciales facti, placuisse denarium sedecim assibus permittari, sestertium quaternia. The weight of the as was gradually reduced from its original 12 ounces to 1; and the denarius, properly ten asses, was made = sixteen, the sestertius = four asses.

³ Secessit. On three or more occasions the plebs removed in a body from the city. See Livy, ii. 32 (A.U. 260); iii. 50 (A.U. 305); Epit. xi. (A.U. 466); Sallust, Jugur. 31, speaks of two secessions to the Aventine. They were prevailed upon to return by concessions accorded them by the patricians.

⁴ Amittit, "parts with," assimilare, to let a thing be taken from one, perdere, to throw it away.

⁵ Quoniam modo, "how we may sell our lives as dearly as possible."

XXXIV. Ad hæc Q. Marcius: “Si quid ab senatu petere vellent, ab armis¹ discedant², Roman supplices proficiscantur: ea mansuetudine atque misericordia senatum populumque Romanum semper fuisse, ut nemo unquam ab eo frustra auxilium petiverit.” At Catilina ex itinere plerisque consulibus, præterea optimo cuique³, litteras mittit: “Se falsis criminibus circumventum, quoniam factioni inimicorum resistere nequiverit, fortunæ cedere, Massiliam in exilium⁴ proficisci; non quo⁵ sibi tanti sceleris conscientius esset, sed uti respublica quieta foret, neve ex sua contentione seditio oriretur.” Ab his longe diversas litteras Q. Catulus⁶ in senatu recitavit, ¹ Vellent... discedant. Observe the change of construction. “Marcius said, If they wished to make any suit to the senate, let them lay down their arms.” Comp. c. 32. quibus rebus possent opes factionis confirmari.

³ Optimo cuique, “the most distinguished among the nobles.” So the highest aristocracy were called the optimates.

⁴ Massiliam in exilium: comp. Cicero, in Catil. ii. 6. Massilia, the modern Marseilles, was founded by the Phœceans (Thuc. i. 13) on the south coast of Gaul, about 600 B.C., and became celebrated for its commerce and civilization. When the Romans gained a footing on the further side of the Alps, they formed an alliance with Massilia, and allowed it to retain a nominal independence and sovereignty over a small district on the coast. The Roman provinces being governed by proconsuls sent there by the oligarchical party, and all their influence brought to bear upon the allies of the republic, Massilia became firmly attached to the senate; and Catiline, in pretending to choose it for his place of exile, intimated that he was falsely accused of hostility to the ruling faction. Exile among the Romans was banishment to a place beyond the direct control of the commonwealth, but any allied city was allowed to receive exiles, however near it might be to Rome. Gradually all the free states were absorbed into the provinces, and there ceased to be any place of asylum for exiles within the frontiers of the empire.

⁵ Non quo. An elliptic expression for non eo quod.

⁶ Q. Catulus: the princeps or premier of the senate, consul A.U.

quas sibi nomine Catilinæ redditas dicebat : earum exemplum¹ infra scriptum :

XXXV. “L. Catilina Q. Catulo. Egregia tua fides, re cognita, gratam in magnis periculis fiduciam commendationi meæ² tribuit. Quamobrem defensionem³ in novo consilio⁴ non statui parare ; satisfactionem ex nulla conscientia de culpa⁵ proponere decrevi, quam, me dius fidius⁶, veram licet cognoscas⁷. Injuriis contumeliisque concitatus, quod, fructu laboris industriæque meæ privatus, statum dignitatis⁸ non obtinebam, publicam miserorum caussam pro mea consuetudine suscepi : non quin æs alienum meis nominibus⁹ ex possessionibus solvere possem, 676. He was the most illustrious of the oligarchical party both in rank and reputation. Catulus was of the Lutatian, properly Luctatian, gens.

² Commendationi meæ, “to this recommendation of my interests to your care.”

³ Defensionem, “judicial defence;” satisfactionem, “private explanation.”

⁵ Conscientia de culpa, “consciousness of guilt;” as Cic. ad Att. ii. 24: his de rebus conscientium esse Pisonem.

⁶ Me dius fidius; i. e. ita me Dius, i. e. Jovis filius (Hercules), juvet. Some suppose there to be a Deus Fidius, from a passage in Plautus, Azin i. 1. 8: per Diuum Fidium quæ-

but this appears to be a mock personification.

⁷ Licet cognoscas, “you may ascertain if you please.”

⁸ Statum dignitatis. Cortius observes that status is the position a man holds, gradus that which he seeks, therefore proposes to substitute the latter for the former here; on the supposition that status dignitatis means the consulship which Catiline failed to obtain. It refers, however, to the position which Catiline already occupied. Translate: “I could not maintain the privilege of my high position, which authorised me to expect success in suing for the consulship.” Comp. c. 18. Catilina, pecuniarum repetundarum reus, prohibitus erat consulatum petere. Obtinere; to hold, keep, preserve.

⁹ Meis nominibus. Sumptum, which occurs here in some MSS. is a gloss, to explain the construction: “debts cum alienis nominibus liberalitas Orestillæ, suis filiæque copiis, persolveret: sed quod non dignos homines honore honestatos¹ videbam, meque falsa suspicione alienatum² sentiebam. Hoc nomine satis honestas, pro meo casu, spes reliquæ dignitatis conservandæ sum secutus. Plura cum scribere vellem, nunciatum est, vim mihi parari. Nunc Orestillam commando, tuæque fidei trado: eam ab injuria defendas, per liberos tuos rogatus. Haveto."

XXXVI. Sed ipse, paucos dies commoratus apud C. Flaminium in agro Arretino³, dum vicinitatem, antea sollicitatam, armis exornat⁴, cum fascibus⁵ atque aliis imperii insignibus in castra ad Manlium contendit. Hæc ubi Romæ comperta; senatus "Catilinam et Manlium hostes⁶ judicat; ceteræ multitu-contracted on my own account," "inscribed in the ledger with my name;" (nomen or nomina may be used indifferently), alienis nom. sub. æs alienum sumptum, "debts incurred as surety for others," "inscribed with others' names."

² Alienatum, "cast out." Alienare significat alienos reddere et e familia ejicare. Ruhnken on Ter. Heaut. v. 2. 26.

³ In agro Arretino. Arretium, mod. Arezzo, lay almost on the direct road from Rome to Fæsulae. This reading is therefore to be preferred to Reatino, which most editions follow. Reate, in the country of the Sabines, was far to the right.

⁴ Exornat, "furnishes:" so, clas- sem exornare, "to equip a fleet."

dini diem statuit, ante quam sine fraude¹ liceret ab armis discedere, præter rerum capitalium condemnatis².” Præterea decernit, “uti consules delectum³ habeant; Antonius cum exercitu Catilinam persequi maturet⁴; Cicero urbi præsidio sit.” Ea tempestate mihi imperium populi Romani multo maxime miserable visum: cui cum, ad occasum ab ortu⁵ solis, omnia domita armis paterent; domi otium atque divitiæ, quæ prima mortales putant, adfluerent; fuere tamen cives qui seque remque publicam obstinatis animis perditum irent⁶. Namque, duobus sénati depellabant, per eam adjectionem indicantes, cum quibus bellum erat. Perduellis then means a foreign enemy with whom there may be bellum, legitimate warfare; but the pirate, non est ex perduellium numero sed communis hostis omnium. Cic. Off. iii. 29. This is a further distinction, and in this sense the outlawed conspirator might be designated hostis more correctly than perduellis. Duellum, i. q. bellum, from the same root as duo, etc., signifying “division.”

² Præter...condemnatis: the part depends upon liceret, after which understand iis: præter adverbial, i. q. præterquam. Comp. Justin, xiii. 5. omnium civitatum exsules, præter cædis damnati, restituebantur. Suet. Ner. 56. religionum contemptor præter unius Dei Syriæ.

⁴ Persequi maturet. Comp. Tac. Hist. v. 18. si Romana classis sequi maturasset, i. e. celeriter secuta esset. Jugur. 36. 79.

⁶ Perditum irent, “sought to destroy:” implying wish and endeavour to effect an object. Comp. Catil. 52. Jugur. 31. 86.

cretis¹, ex tanta multitudine, neque præmio inductus conjurationem patefecerat, neque ex castris Catilinæ quisquam omnium discesserat: tanta vis morbi, uti tabes², plerosque civium animos invaserat.

XXXVII. Neque solum illis aliena³ mens erat, qui consciæ conjurationis fuerant; sed omnino cuncta plebes, novarum rerum studio, Catilinæ incepta probabant. Id adeo⁴ more suo videbatur facere. Nam semper in civitate, quibus opes nullæ sunt, bonis invident, malos extollunt; vetera odere, nova exoptant; odio suarum rerum mutari omnia student; turba atque seditionibus sine cura aluntur⁵, quoniam egestas facile habetur sine damno. Sed urbana plebes, ea vero⁶ præceps ierat⁷ multis de caussis. Primum omnium, qui ubique probro atque petulantia maxime præstabant⁸;

² Uti tabes, “like a contagion.” Some MSS. read atque uti tabes: “and as it were contagion.”

⁴ Id adeo. The force of adeo is here emphatic, “in fact;” being a stronger affirmation of a previous proposition. Comp. Jugur. 66. eum imperium Numidiae sine mora habiturum: id adeo mature posse evenire; and again 110, 111.

⁵ Aluntur, etc., “they get their living without anxiety in tumults and seditions, because poverty wants little, and has nothing to lose.” Habetur, i. q. toleratur: egentes facile vitam degunt.

⁷ Præceps ierat, “had become utterly demoralized, or reckless.” Comp. Catil. 25. luxuria atque inopia præceps abierat.

⁸ Præstabant, “exceeded;” rarely used as here in a bad sense; but Comp. Cic. de Leg. i. 19. qui singulis vitiis excellunt.

item alii per dedecora patrimonii amissis; pos-tremo omnes quos flagitium aut facinus domo ex-pulerat; ii Romam, sicuti in sentinam¹, confluxerant. Deinde, multi memores Sullanæ victoriæ, quod, ex gregariis militibus² alios senatores videbant, alios ita divites³, uti regio victu atque cultu⁴ statem agerent, sibi quisque, si in armis forent, ex victoria talia spe-rabant. Præterea, juventus, quæ in agris, manuum mercede⁵, inopiam toleraverat, privatis atque pub-licis largitionibus⁶ excita, urbanum otium ingrato labori prætulerant⁷. Eos⁸ atque alios omnes malum publicum alebat. Quo minus mirandum, homines egentes, malis moribus, maxima spe, reipublicæ juxta⁹

² Ex gregariis militibus, "of the common soldiers."

³ Ita divites. Comp. Catil. 51. ne-que prius finis jugulandi fuit quam Sulla omnes suos divitiis explevit.

⁴ Regio victu atque cultu, "in regal luxury." The term rex was applied invidiously to citizens of extraordinary wealth and ostentatious manner of living. So regum pueri: the delicate children of the nobility. Pers. iii. 17.

⁵ Manuum mercede, "with the wages of manual labour." Comp. Virg. Aen. viii. 409. Cui tolerare colo vitam tenuique Minerva.

⁶ Privatis atque publicis largiti-onibus, i. e. distributions of corn, oil, or wine, made by rich patrons to their clients; or by candidates for office, or actual magistrates to the people. Thus Crassus, after the defeat of Spar-tacus, when suing for the consulship, A. U. 683, feasted the Roman people at ten thousand tables. Public largesses had been given occasionally, and C. Gracchus introduced the sale of corn at low fixed prices to the citizens; but M. Cato first advised a regular gratuitous distribution, in the hope of with-drawing the needy citizens from the influence of the demagogues. The largess (five bushels, Sall. Fr. Hist.) was given monthly, Suet. Ost. 40.

⁷ Prætulerat: depending upon que, as toleraverat.

⁸ Eos: scil. juvenes, understood in juventus: the construction is broken, juventus being a nomin. absolute.

ac sibi consuluisse. Præterea, quorum, victoria Sullæ, parentes proscripti, bona erecta, jus libertatis immunitum¹ erat, haud sane alio animo belli eventum expectabant. Ad hoc, quicumque aliarum atque senati² partium erant, conturbari rempublicam, quam minus valere ipsi, malebant. Id adeo malum³ multos post annos in civitatem reverterat.

XXXVIII. Nam, postquam, Cn. Pompeio et M. Crasso consulibus⁴, tribunicia potestas restituta est⁵;

¹ Jus libertatis immunitum, "treated as if they were neither citizens nor freemen," i.e. deprived of the privileges of the constitution. The families of the proscribed were incapacitated for holding public office by a Lex Cornelia, A. u. 673. Vell. ii. 28. exclusique paternis opibus liberi etiam petendorum honorum jure prohiberentur, simulque quod indignissimum est, senatorum filii et onera ordinis sustinerent et jura perderent. The rehabilitation of these persons was agitated for many years; defeated by Cicero in his consulship; and at last effected by Cæsar as dictator. See Plutarch, Cæs. 37 (A. u. 705); Suet. Jul. 75.

² Aliarum atque senati. Atque and ac are used after words of comparison, e.g. idem, pars, similis, aliis, eque, perinde, aliter, secus; where the sense can only be rendered in English by "as," or "than." Ut, however, sometimes occurs with atque, as Cic. in Verr. i. 46. aliter atque ut edixerat; from which it may be surmised that the copula of comparison has dropped out of the idiom; and that atque had originally in its proper sense of "immediately," "just;" e.g. hic facit

idem atque (quod) ego, he does just the same as I do.

³ Id adeo malum: emphatic, "that evil, then;" or "that evil, great as it was:" namely, the inveterate jealousy of the commons towards the senate, dating at least from the times of the Gracchi, sixty or seventy years before.

⁴ Cn. Pompeio, M. Crasso Coss. A. u. 684.

⁵ Tribunicia potestas restituta est. Among the principal measures of Sulla for curbing the pretensions of the Marian or popular party at Rome, and securing to the senate the administration of affairs, was the restriction he placed upon the prerogative of the tribunes of the plebs. Comp. Appian, Bell. Civ. i. 100. τὴν δὲ τῶν δημάρχων ἀρχὴν ίσα καὶ ἀνεῖλεν, αὐθεντιστάτην ἀποφέγγιας, καὶ νόμῳ κωλύσας μηδεμίᾳ ἀλληλη τὸν δημαρχοῦ ἀρχὴν ἔτι ἀρχειν. Liv. Epit. lxxxix. Tribunorum plebis potestatem minut et omne jus ferendarum legum ademit. The ancient right of intercessio, or a veto on motions in the senate, still remained to them. At the same time Sulla confined the comitia of the tribes to the election of the inferior magishomines adolescentes¹, summam potestatem² nacti, quibus ætas animusque ferox erat, cœpere, senatum criminando, plebem exagitare; dein, largiendo atque pollicitando, magis incendere; ita ipsi clari potentesque fieri. Contra eos summa ope nitebatur pleraque nobilitas, senati specie³, pro sua magnitudine. Namque, uti paucis absolvam, per illa tempora quicumque rempublicam agitavere, honestis nominibus, alii, sicuti⁴ populi jura defenderent, pars, quo senati auctoritas maxima foret, bonum publicum simulantibus, pro sua quisque potentia⁵ certabant: neque modestia, neque modus contentionis erat: utriusque victoriam crudeliter exercebant.

trates, forbidding it to enact laws or receive criminal appeals. All these prerogatives were restored by a Lex Pompeia, in the year above mentioned. Vell. ii. 30. Pompeius tribuniciam potestatem restituit, cuius Sulla imaginem sine re reliquerat.

² Summam potestatem: meaning the tribunate, which since the lex Pompeia had become the most influential office in the state.

³ Senati specie, "under pretence of supporting the authority of the senate," but really to maintain their own ascendancy. Comp. Lucan, ix. 206. non jam regnare pudebit, Nec color imperii, nec frons erit ulla senatus: "henceforth men will act the king without scruple, there will be no colour of legitimate command, nor pretence of senatorial authority."

⁴ Sicuti, "as though." Comp. Catil. 31. sicuti iurgio lacessitus foret.

⁵ Potentia: power, without respect to its legality, and generally in opposition to legitimate authority, potestas. Comp. Catil. 39. paucorum potentia crevit. Lucan, iv. in fin.

XXXIX. Sed, postquam Cn. Pompeius ad bellum maritimum atque Mithridaticum¹ missus est; plebis opes imminutæ²; paucorum potentia crevit. Hi magistratus, provincias, aliaque omnia tenere: ipsi innoxii³, florentes, sine metu statem agere; ceteros⁴ [que] judiciis terrere, quo plebem⁵ in magistratu

The “Mithridatic war” was the long contest waged by the republic against Mithridates, the renowned king of Pontus. Sulla had defeated, and was supposed to have crushed him; but he rose again, and wrested the province of Asia from the Romans. Lucullus again defeated him, but he was still unconquered; and at last, at the motion of Manilius, the Roman people appointed Pompey to carry on the war against him, with full powers throughout the eastern possessions of the republic. This extraordinary commission was regarded by the senate with great jealousy. It was apprehended that Pompey would never consent to return to Rome as a private man. Nevertheless, after the successful completion of his task, and the addition of extensive provinces to the empire, he disbanded his legions, and was content to be the first citizen in the free state. But he afterwards repented, and tried, by a league with Cæsar and Crassus, (the first triumvirate,) to acquire a more decided supremacy in the commonwealth. The Manilian law was carried A. U. 688.

² Plebis opes imminutæ, “the power of the commons was curtailed.” During Pompey’s absence the nobles strove to recover their ascendancy, which he had considerably reduced in his consulship, A. U. 684.

³ Innoxii, passive, “secure from attack.” Comp. Lucan, ix. 891:

Gens unica terras
Incolit a sævo serpentum innoxia morsu.
Columella, v. 9: Innoxius ab injuria pecorum.

placidius tractarent. Sed ubi primum, dubiis rebus¹, novandi spes oblata est, vetus certamen animos eorum² arrexit. Quodsi primo prælio Catilina superior, aut æqua manu, discessisset, profecto magna clades atque calamitas rempublicam oppressisset, neque illis, qui victoriam adepti forent, diutius ea uti licuisset, quin defessis et exsanguibus³, qui plus posset, imperium atque libertatem extorqueret. Fuere tamen extra conjurationem complures, qui ad Catilinam initio profecti sunt: in his A. Fulvius⁴, senatoris filius; quem, retractum ex itinere, parens necari jussit. Iisdem temporibus Romæ Lentulus, sicuti Catilina præceperat, quoscumque moribus aut fortuna novis rebus but more especially the tribunes of the people, who are said to be in magistratu, incorrectly, because the tribunate was not strictly a magistracy, but who frequently used their power, as such, to harass the real magistrates, the consuls and praetors. Disappointed candidates, especially if they were tribunes, excited the people against their rulers; but by an unscrupulous use of the judicia, the magistrates, secure themselves, terrified them into moderation. Placidius tractarent, “keep them quiet,” as opposed to accenderent or exagitarent. But this sense is questionable. Placidius tractarent should rather mean, “treat with kindness;” and Kritz’s emendation, qui for quo, seems preferable.

dubiis rebus ejus, ultionem ansua. Se rebus perditis, rebus secundis, etc. The reading novandi is supported by some MSS., while novandis, which is commonly adopted, is bad both in sense and grammar.

³ Exsanguibus; i. e. invalidis. Comp. Cic. pro Sest. 10: hominibus enervatis atque exsanguibus.

idoneos credebat, aut per se, aut per alios sollicitabat; neque solum cives, sed cujusque modi genus hominum, quod modo bello usui foret¹.

XL. Igitur P. Umbreno cuidam negotium dat, uti legatos Allobrogum² requirat, eosque, si possit, impellat ad societatem belli; existimans, publice privatimque ære alieno oppressos, præterea, quod natura gens Gallica bellicosa esset, facile eos ad tale consilium adduci posse. Umbrenus, quod in Gallia negotiatus erat³, plerisque principibus civitatum notus erat, atque eos noverat: itaque sine mora, ubi primum legatos in foro conspexit, percunctatus pauca de statu civitatis, et quasi dolens ejus casum, requirere cœpit, “quem exitum tantis malis sperarent?” Postquam illos videt⁴ “queri de avaritia magistratum, accusare senatum, quod in eo auxili i nihil esset; miseriis suis remedium mortem exspectare:” “At ego,” inquit,

¹ Quod modo bello usui foret, “as long as they could be of any service, at least for fighting, if for nothing else.”

² Legatos Allobrogum. The Allobroges, a tribe between the Rhone and Isere, had sent envoys to Rome to complain of the exactions of the provincial government, and to sue for a remission of their public debts. They had been with difficulty conquered, and had more than once revolted. Cicero says of them, in Catil. iii. 6: quam gentem unam restare (of all the southern Gauls) quæ populo Rom. bellum facere, et posse, et non nolle videretur. Comp. Cæ. B. G.

i. 6. Q. Fabius Maximus obtained the surname Allobrogicus for his victory over them as far back as A. U. 634. Juvenal, viii. 13:

Natus in Herculeo Fabius lare.

³ Negotiatus erat, “was established in trade,” and had therefore resided among them. The *negotiato*r was generally a money-lender.

⁴ Videt: i. q. cognoscit, accipit, audit. Comp. Liv. xxxiv. 31: nunc tyrannum me vocari video. Cic. pro Arch. 8: quoties ego hunc Archiam vidi magnum versuum dicere ex tempore.

“vobis, si modo viri esse vultis, rationem ostendam, qua tanta ista mala¹ effugiatis.” Hæc ubi dixit, Allobroges in maximam spem adducti, Umbrenum orare, uti sui misereretur: nihil tam asperum, neque tam difficile esse, quod non cupidissime facturi essent, dum ea res civitatem ære alieno liberaret. Ille eos in domum D. Bruti² perducit; quod foro propinquæ erat, neque aliena consilii³, propter Semproniam; nam tum Brutus ab Roma aberat. Præterea Gabinium accersit, quo major auctoritas sermoni inesset: eo præsente conjurationem aperit; nominat socios, præterea multos cujusque generis innoxios⁴, quo legatis animus amplior esset; deinde eos pollicitos operam suam domum dimittit.

XLI. Sed Allobroges diu in incerto habuere, quidnam consilii caperent. In altera parte erat æs alienum, studium belli⁵, magna merces in spe victoriae: at in altera maiores opes⁶, tuta consilia⁷, pro incerta spe certa præmia. Hæc illis volventibus, tandem vicit fortuna reipublicæ. Itaque Q. Fabio

² In domum D. Bruti. Cicero says, ad Gabinium legatos esse perductos; but this does not mean “to the house of Gabinius,” but “to meet him,” as Sallust also says afterwards.

⁴ Innoxios, “innocent of the conspiracy.”

⁵ Studium belli, “their nation’s wish for war.”

⁶ Maiores opes, “ampler resources;” i. e. the whole strength of the republic, as compared with the forces on which the conspirators relied.

⁷ Tuta consilia, “a secure course,” taking the side of the government they risked nothing.

Sangæ, cuius patrocinio¹ civitas plurimum utebatur, rem omnem, uti cognoverant, aperiunt. Cicero, per Sangam consilio cognito, legatis præcepit, ut² studium conjurationis vehementer simulent, ceteros ad-eant, bene polliceantur ; dentque operam, uti eos quam maxime manifestos habeant.

XLII. Iisdem fere temporibus in Gallia³ Citeriore atque Ulteriore, item in agro Piceno, Bruttio⁴, Apulia, motus erat. Namque illi, quos antea Catilina dimiserat, inconsulte ac veluti per dementiam cuncta simul⁵ agebant : nocturnis consiliis⁶, armorum atque telorum portationibus, festinando, agitando omnia, plus timoris quam periculi effecerant. Ex eo numero complures Q. Metellus Celer prætor, ex senati consulto, caussa cognita⁷, in vincula conjecerat ; item in

² Præcepit ut. The perf. is found in the majority of MSS.: the change of tense is much in the author's manner. Comp. Jugur. 28 : his præcepit omnes mortales pecunia aggrediantur. illi. regi patefecit quod polliceatur. The conjunction is found in all the MSS. but two.

³ Gallia. At this time the republic possessed two provinces named Gaul: the "hither," citerior, south of the Alps, bounded by the rivers Rubicon and Æsar, and the "further," ulterior, north of the Alps, extending to the Rhone and the Cevennes. The hither province was divided into Cispadane and Transpadane, with reference to the river Po (Padus) which intersected it.

⁴ Bruttio. The western peninsular extremity of Italy was called Brutium : here the word is an adjective, agreeing with agro. So, Bruttia saxa, Pers. vi. 27.

⁵ Cuncta simul, "every thing at once," as madmen might do.

⁷ Caussa cognita, "after examination."

Ulteriore Gallia¹ C. Murena, qui ei provinciae legatus² praeerat.

XLIII. At Romæ Lentulus cum ceteris, qui principes conjurationis erant, paratis, ut videbantur, magnis³ copiis, constituerant⁴, uti, quum Catilina in agrum Fæsulanum cum exercitu venisset, L. Bestia tribunus plebis, concione habita, quereretur de actionibus Ciceronis⁵, bellique gravissimi invidiam optimo consuli⁶ imponeret; eo signo, proxima nocte⁷ cetera

² Legatus. A lieutenant of the imperator, or governor of a province. Sometimes the governor being himself absent deputed his charge to a legatus. But in this case the legatus was sent by the Senate itself, and no proconsul appointed. Comp. Cic. de Prov. Cons. 3. atque hanc Macedoniam... etiam sine imperio per legatos tuebamur.

³ Ut videbantur magnis, "such as appeared to be considerable." The impersonal form videbatur, is more usual. But comp. Cic. ad Div. xvi. 4. teque, ut mihi visus est, diligit, instead of, visum est.

⁴ Constituerant. The plur. supported by many of the best MSS. is referred irregularly to Lentulus cum ceteris, as though it were Lentulus ceterique. Comp. Jugur. 101. Bocchus cum peditibus...invadunt. Liv. xxi. 60. ipse dux cum principibus capiuntur.

⁵ De actionibus Ciceronis, "of the actions, i. e. conduct of Cicero." Actiones in the plur. is rare in this sense. Comp. Cic. de Off. ii. 1. actiones sum scriptis mandare. It is generally used technically of legal proceedings. It was the policy of the conspirators to pretend that Cicero had got up a false rumour of a plot in order to drive innocent men away from the city. Comp. Appian, Bell. Civ. ii. 3. Αέκιον δὲ Βρεταίνων τὸν διμαρχού ἐκαλησίαν εὐθὺς ὑπὸ κήρυξ συνάγειν, καὶ κατηγορεῖν τοῦ Κικέρωνος, οἰς δε δειλοῦ καὶ πολεμοποιοῦ, καὶ τὴν τόλιν ἐν οὐδενὶ δεινῷ διαταράσσοντος.

⁶ Optimo consuli. It seems that M. Brutus in writing an account of these transactions used this same expression, optimus consul, with reference to Cicero's part in them. Cicero in a letter to Atticus, xii. 21, complains of the account as calculated to exalt Cato's conduct in comparison with his own, and refers to this phrase as disparaging. Hic autem se etiam tribuere multum mihi putat, quod scripserit optimum consulem. It is probable, from the character of his multitudo conjurationis¹ suum quisque negotium exsequeretur. Sed ea divisa hoc modo dicebantur: Statilius et Gabinius uti cum magna manu duodecim simul² opportuna loca urbis incenderent, quo tumultu facilior aditus ad consulem, ceterosque, quibus insidiæ parabantur, fieret: Cethegus Ciceronis januam obsideret, eum vi adgrederetur, alius autem alium: sed filii familiarum³, quorum ex nobilitate maxima pars, parentes interficerent; simul, cæde et incendio perculsis omnibus, ad Catilinam erumperent. Inter hæc parata atque decreta, Cethegus semper querebatur de ignavia sociorum: illos dubitando, et dies promind, that Brutus was very cold and measured in his laudation of the consul, and in his mouth the word optimus might have a formal and pedantic sound. But I do not think Sallust meant anything depreciatory. Optimus was itself a hearty and genial word, and occurs in the most complimentary descriptions. Juvenal, x. 331. Optimus hic et formosissimus idem gentis patriciæ. Cicero himself uses it of Pansa; consul fortissimus atque optimus. Philipp. vii. 2.

Exsequeretur in the sing. (the reading of the MSS.) refers to quisque, not to multitudo. Comp. Cic. de Off. i. 41. et vero etiam poëta sum quisque opus a vulgo considerari vult.

² Duodecim simul. Plutarch doubtless exaggerates when he says that the conspirators assigned a hundred different places to be fired at the same time.

XLIV. Sed Allobroges, ex præcepto Ciceronis, per Gabinium ceteros conveniunt²; ab Lentulo, Cethego, Statilio, item Cassio, postulant jusjurandum³, quod signatum⁴ ad cives perferant: aliter⁵ haud facile eos ad tantum negotium impelli posse. Ceteri nihil suspicantes dant: Cassius semet eo brevi venturum pollicetur, ac paullo ante legatos ex urbe profiscitur. Lentulus cum his T. Volturciū quemdam, Crotoniensem⁶, mittit, uti Allobroges prius, quam domum pergerent, cum Catilina, data et accepta fide, societatem confirmarent. Ipse Volturcio litteras ad Catilinam dat, quarum exemplum infra scriptum est: "Quis sim⁷, ex eo quem ad te misi, cognosces. Fac cogites, in quanta calamitate sis, et memineris te virum esse; consideres, quid tuae rationes postulent; auxilium petas ab omnibus, etiam

² Ceteros convenient, "have an interview with the others."

³ Postulant jusjurandum, "demand a written form of oath."

⁴ Signatum, "with the seals of the parties affixed."

⁵ Aliter: i. q. alioguin.

⁶ Crotoniensem, "a citizen of Crotona," in Brutium.

Pompelinio⁴, prætoribus, imperat, uti in ponte Mulvio⁵ per insidias Allobrogum comitatus deprehendant: rem omnem aperit, cuius gratia mittebantur: cetera, uti facto opus sit, ita agant, permittit. Illi homines militares⁶, sine tu-

¹ Etsam ab ingens. This was a covert suggestion to arm slaves, which was too atrocious a design to be committed to writing, though recommended, as we see immediately afterwards, orally. Comp. the same letter recited, with some variation, by Cicero, in Catil. iii. 5. Probably neither author cared to quote with perfect accuracy. No reliance whatever can be placed on Sallust saying just above, quarum exemplum infra scriptum.

² Quo consilio servitia repudiet? "what would be the sense of rejecting the employment of slaves?"

³ L. Valerius Flaccus. The same whom Cicero defended upon a charge of malversation in the province of Asia.

⁴ C. Pompelinus; or Pomtinus. His family were probably of Suessa Pometia, in Latium, whence the paludes Pomptine derived their name. This Pomptinius succeeded Murena in Transalpine Gaul, and effected the final pacification of the Allobroges, over whom he triumphed, A.U. 700, for his victory A.U. 693.

⁵ In ponte Mulvio. The Mulvian, or Milvian bridge (perhaps, from M. Æmilius Scaurus, who is said to have built it), crossed the Tiber on the Flaminian way, two miles north of Rome. The great battle between Constantine and Maxentius A.D. 312, took its name from this bridge. It is now called Ponte Molle: some part of the structure is supposed to be original. A bridge would be a convenient spot for intercepting travellers. At such a point it was more difficult to escape. Being narrow, and generally with a considerable elevation, carriages would slacken their pace at them. Beggars and loiterers infested them, and waylayers might keep a look out from them without exciting suspicion.

multu præsidiis collocatis¹, sicuti præceptum erat, occulte pontem obsidunt². Postquam ad id loci legati cum Volturcio venere, et simul utrimque³ clamor exortus est; Galli, cito cognito consilio, sine mora prætoribus se tradunt. Volturcius primo, cohortatus ceteros, gladio se a multitudine defendit; deinde ubi a legatis desertus est, multa prius de salute sua Pomptinium obtestatus⁴, quod ei notus erat, postremo timidus, ac vitæ diffidens, veluti hostibus, sese prætoribus dedit⁵.

Nam hætabatur, intelligens, conjuratione patefacta, civitatem periculis erectam esse: porro autem anxius erat, dubitans, in maximo scelere tantis civibus deprehensis, quid facto opus esset; poenam illorum sibi oneri⁶, impunitatem perdendæ reipublicæ⁷ credebat. Igitur, confirmato animo, vocari ad sese jubet Lentulum, Cethegum, Statilium, Gabinium, item Q. Cœparium quemdam,

² Pontem obsidunt, "occupy the bridge." Obsident, the reading of some MSS. and Edd. would mean, "besiege," "beleaguer."

³ Utrumque, "on either side of the bridge;" the ambush being laid, as Cicero describes, on both sides.

⁴ Multa obtestatus, "urging Pomptinius with many arguments."

⁵ Dedit. Probably the pres. from dedo, "gives himself up;" dedo implies more entire submission than the simple do.

⁶ Sibi oneri, etc., "would bring a burden of odium upon himself."

⁷ Perdenda reipublicæ, etc., "would conduce to the destruction of the commonwealth."

Terracinensem¹, qui in Apuliam ad concitanda servitia proficisci parabat. Ceteri sine mora veniunt: Cœparius, paullo ante domo egressus, cognito indicio, ex urbe profugerat. Consul Lentulum, quod prætor erat, ipse manu tenens² perducit; reliquos cum custodibus in ædem Concordiæ³ venire jubet. Eo senatum advocat, magna frequentia⁴ ejus ordinis, Volturciūm cum legatis introducit: Flaccum prætorem scriinium cum litteris, quas a legatis acceperat, eodem adferre jubet.

XLVII. Volturcius interrogatus “de itinere, de litteris, postremo quid, aut qua de caussa, consilii habuisset?”, primo fingere alia⁵, dissimulare de coniuratione; post, ubi fide publica⁶ dicere jussus est, omnia, uti gesta erant, aperit, docetque, “se paucis ante diebus a Gabinio et Cœpario socium adscitum, ² Manu tenens, “leading by the hand;” as a mark of honour.

³ In ædem Concordiæ. The foundations of this temple are still visible at the foot of the Capitoline hill, facing the forum. It was built by Camillus, and commemorated the restoration of concord between the senate and people. Plutarch, Camill.

⁴ Magna frequentia, “at a full meeting.” The senate at this time amounted nominally to six hundred members; but the vacancies caused by death had not been regularly supplied by the censors. Four hundred and fifteen members divided at a full meeting. Cic. ad Att. i. 14. Comp. Cic. Post Red. in Sen. 10. Allowance must be made for the number of senators engaged in the provincial administration. The meetings were held in the cella, or interior chamber of the temple (comp. Cic. Philipp. ii. 8), and in this case the prisoners were introduced from the outer chamber.

⁵ Alia, “other than the truth;” so the phrase, in alia omnes abire, “to run off to matters other than those in hand, not pertinent to the affair.”

⁶ Fide publica, (scil. data) “on the public faith being pledged for his safety.” Comp. Catil. 48. se indicaturum si fides publica data esset. Jugur. 32. 35.

nihil amplius scire, quam legatos¹: tantummodo audire solitum ex Gabinio, P. Autronium, Servium Sullam, L. Vargunteium, multos præterea in ea coniuratione esse." Eadem Galli fatentur; ac Lentulum dissimulanten coarguunt, præter litteras, sermonibus, quos ille habere solitus erat: "ex libris Sibyllinis², regnum Romæ tribus Cornelii portendi: Cinnam³ atque Sullam antea; se tertium, cui fatum foret urbis potiri: præterea ab incenso Capitolio⁴ illum esse vi-gesimum annum, quem sœpe ex prodigiis haruspices respondissent bello civili cruentum fore." Igitur, per-

"that he knew no more of the secrets of the plot than the Allobroges," who as foreigners could not be supposed intimate with its secret objects and ramifications: in short, he professed to be an instrument of the conspirators, but not an associate. He had only heard the names of a few individuals among them. Kritz explains it, se præterquam quod legatos sciat coniurationis participes esse nullam plane ex coniuratis nosse: and adds, nihil de personis dictum non insolens est.

² Ex libris Sibyllinis. Certain volumes so called, containing predictions regarding the destinies of the republic, were kept in custody of special officers called Quindecimvirs, and formed an important engine of state. Many other vaticinations, pretending to the authority of the Sibyls, were current among the citizens, and it is to some of these probably that Lentulus referred. The emperor Augustus found these impostures such a nuisance to the government that he caused a pretended authentic compilation to be made, and gave all the rest he could collect to the flames.

³ Cinnam. L. Cornelius Cinnus, a leader of the popular party during the absence of Sulla in the east (A. U. 666—669). He was consul A. U. 667, when he impeached Sulla, and recalled Marius from exile. Being driven out of Rome by his colleague Octavian, he returned with a military force, took the city, and exacted a proscription of the aristocratic party. He was eventually killed in a mutiny of his own soldiers whom he was leading against Sulla.

⁴ Ab incenso Capitolio: i. e. from the year 671, when the capitol was destroyed in the wars of Marius and Sulla. It was again burnt in the contest of the Vitellian and Flavian soldiers, A. D. 70, and once more by accident in the reign of Domitian. Lactantius says that, up to his time, in the fourth century, it had been frequently destroyed by lightning. iii. 17.

XLVIII. Interea plebes, conjuratione patefacta⁸, quæ primo, cupida rerum novarum, nimis bello favebat, mutata mente, Catilinæ consilia exsecrari, Ciceronem ad eosculum tollere: veluti ex servitute erupta, gaudium atque lætitiam⁹ agitabant. Namque alia

² In liberis custodiis, "in free custody." Persons of distinction were often placed under the care of the magistrates in their houses, instead of being consigned to the prison. Comp. Tac. Ann. vi. 3: Gallio retrahitur in arbum custoditque dominibus magistratum. Cic. Brut. 96: quoniam eloquenties quasi tutores relicti sumus, domi teneamus eam septam liberali custodia.

³ P. Lentulo Spintheri. Consul. A. U. 697. Spinther means, a bracelet. Gr. σφίγγη. Lentulus is said to have derived his surname from his similarity to a certain actor of the day so called.

⁴ Q. Cornificio. A colleague of Cicero's in the augurship. Cic. ad Div. xii. 17.

⁵ C. Cæsari. Caius Julius Caesar.

⁶ Gabinius. This obscure personage is not to be confounded with Aulus Gabinius, an adherent of Pompey, in whose interest he proposed the Lex Gabinia, for giving him the conduct of the war against the pirates, and imperium throughout all the coasts of the Mediterranean and fifty miles inland, A. U. 688.

⁷ M. Crasso. M. Licinius Crassus the triunvir.

⁸ Conjuratione patefacta. The affair was revealed to the people by Cicero in a speech (his third Catilinarian oration) which he delivered in the forum on the 3rd of December (=Feb. 5. B. C. 62), after the examination of the Allobroges before the senate. Cic. ad Att. ii. 1: quo die Allobroges involvagunt.

Sed ubi Tarquinius Crassum nominavit, hominem nobilem, maximis divitiis, summa potentia; alii, rem incredibilem rati; pars, tamen etsi verum existimabant, tamen, quia in tali tempore tanta vis hominis lenienda, quam exagitanda videbatur; plerique Crasso ex negotiis privatis obnoxii³, conclamant, "indiceum falsum," deque ea re postulant uti referatur⁴. They insisted that the question of Crassus's complicity should be referred to a vote of the senate, that is, to their own decision, and not left to be dealt with by the consuls.

alium indicem, C. Cæsar falso¹ nominaretur. Nam uterque cum illo graves inimicitias exercebant; Piso obpugnatus in judicio repetundarum, propter cuiusdam Transpadani² supplicium injustum; Catulus ex petitione pontificatus³ odio incensus, quod, extrema æstate, maximis honoribus usus, ab adolescentulo⁴ Cæsare victus discesserat. Res autem opportuna videbatur⁵; quod, privatim egregia liberalitate, publice maximis muneribus⁶, grandem pecuniam debebat⁷. Sed,

² Transpadani. An inhabitant of the part of the Cisalpine province beyond the Po. Cæsar was patron of this people, and as such had impeached Piso.

³ Ex petitione pontificatus. Catulus had offered himself as a candidate for the high-priesthood in the year 691, but was opposed, much to his mortification, by Cæsar, then comparatively young and little known. He offered contemptuously to buy off Cæsar's competition by assisting to pay his debts; but Cæsar refused, and declared that he would plunge still more deeply in debt, if necessary, to gain the election: πλειστοσδανεισάρκευσ ἔφη διαγεννησιθε. Plutarch, in Cæs. 7. The people, who had the appointment, elected their favourite.

⁴ Adolescentulo. Cæsar at this time was 37: see note on ch. 38.

⁵ Res autem opportuna videbatur, "the charge seemed well timed," i.e. likely from the circumstances of the case to obtain credit.

⁶ Privatim egregia liberalitas, publice maximis muneribus. Comp. Catil. 54. Cæsar beneficiis atque munificentia magnus habebatur...mansuetudine et misericordia...dando, sublevando, ignoscendo...miseris perfugium...facilitas: in all which respects he is contrasted with Cato. Cæsar's public munificence had been displayed in the shows of his sedilesiphi.

⁷ Grandem pecuniam debebat. Cæsar is said by Plutarch to have owed thirteen hundred talents (= £251,875) ubi consulem ad tantum facinus impellere nequeunt¹, ipsi singulatim circumeundo, atque ementiendo², quæ se ex Volturcio, aut Allobrogibus audisse dicerent, magnam illi invidiam conflaverant; usque eo, ut non-nulli equites Romani, qui, præsidii caussa, cum telis erant circum sèdem Concordiæ, seu periculi magnitudine, seu animi nobilitate³ impulsi, quo studium suum in rem publicam clarius esset⁴, egradienti ex senatu Cæsari gladio minitarentur.

L. Dum hæc in senatu aguntur, et dum legatis Allobrogum et Tito Volturcio, comprobato eorum indicio, præmia decernuntur; liberti⁵, et pauci ex clienti-before he obtained any public employment. When he was about to enter upon his proprietorship in Spain, A. u. 693, he is reported to have said that he wanted one hundred million of sestertes (= £807,291) to be "worth nothing." Crassus on this occasion lent him the sum necessary to defray his outfit, and satisfy his most pressing creditors. But money was at all times freely lent him by the wealthy men of his party, who expected to be amply repaid on his advancement to the highest offices.

¹ Impellere nequent. Caesar engaged Cicero to come forward and declare that he had been actually the first to reveal the existence of the plot to him; and the senate decreed that the reward assigned to Curius should be taken from him, and handed over to the prior informant. Suet. Jul. 17.

² Ementiendo, "by falsely proclaiming." Ementiri is to utter falsehoods audaciously and openly. Comp.

Liv. i. 8; ix. 18; xxv. 8.

³ Nobilitate. I much prefer mobilitate, which is supported by several MSS.

⁴ Clarius esset. This refers to the clause following: they brandished their swords to display their zeal more conspicuously. For the circumstance comp. Plutarch, Cæs. 8, who affirms that these knights looked to Cicero for a signal to massacre Cæsar, which he withheld. He wonders, however, if this were true, why Cicero did not mention it in the history of his consulship. This outrage, however, caused great indignation among the people, who on a subsequent occasion, when Cæsar defended himself in the senate, and was ill received there, surrounded the curia with loud outcries, and insisted on his being dismissed in safety.

bus Lentuli, diversis itineribus, opifices atque servitia in vicis ad eum eripiendum sollicitabant, partim exquirerant duces multitudinum¹, qui pretio rempublicam vexare soliti erant; Cethagus autem, per nuncios, familiam² atque libertos suos, lectos et exercitatos in audaciam, orabat, ut grege facto, cum telis ad sese irrumperent. Consul, ubi ea parari cognovit, dispositis præsidiis³, ut res atque tempus monebat, convocato senatu⁴, refert, QUID DE HIS FIERI PLACEAT, QUI IN CUSTODIAM TRADITI ERANT. Sed eos, paullo ante, frequens senatus judicaverat, CONTRA REMPUBLICAM FECISSE⁵. Tum D. Junius Silanus⁶, primus sententiam rogatus, quod eo tempore consul designatus erat, de his qui in custodiis tenebantur, præterea de L. Cassio, P. Furio, P. Umbreno, Q. ¹ Duces multitudinum, "the leaders of mobs." At this period public affairs were often interrupted by mob violence, and some party chiefs hired the known leaders of the rabble to engage their followers to excite disturbances.

⁴ Convocato senatu: this meeting took place Dec. 5 = Feb. 7. B. C. 62.

⁵ Contrarempublicam fecisse. Upon the occasion of Cicero's second Catilinarian oration (Nov. 9), the senate had declared Catilina and Manlius public enemies. Sallust, Catil. 36. The other conspirators, on being convicted of correspondence with them, fell under the same sentence.

⁶ D. Junius Silanus. He succeeded to the consulship in the following year, with Murena. He was married to Cato's half sister, Servilia. The consul designatus, elected but not yet entered upon his office, was usually asked his opinion first by the actual consul. Comp. Tac. Ann. iii. 22. Tiberius exemitt Drusum, consulem designatum, dicendæ primo loco sententiam. Appian, Bell. Civ. ii. 5.

LJ. "Omnes homines⁴, Patres conscripti, quide-

¹ Pedibus...iturum, "he would take his station by the side of Tib. Nero," i. e. divide with him.

² Referendum censuerat. He had proposed that the question of punishment should stand over for the present, probably till the issue of the contest with Catilina; the culprits being kept in custody during the interval: præsidiis additis, "guards placed over them."

³ Ubi ad eum ventum. There was much irregularity in the order in which opinions were demanded in the senate. The consul (or prætor in his absence) who summoned the meeting, called upon all the members separately to declare their sentiments, which they did either in a speech, or by merely assenting to the opinion of some preceding speaker; in which case they rose from their place, and went over to him. At the conclusion of the debate, the groups thus assembled were counted. Comp. Plin. Ep. viii. 14. 19. lex apertè jubet dirimi debere senten-tias occidentis et relegantis, cum ita discessionem fieri jubet; qui hæc sen-titis in hanc partem, qui alia omnia in illam partem ite, qua sentitis...i. e. in eam in qua sedet qui censuit rele-gandos. The consul usually called first upon one of the consuls-designate, next upon the consulars, the prætors, and other high magistrates.

But he was not bound to any particu-lar order; and in the present case we find Catulus, a consular, speaking af-ter Cæsar, who was prætor-designate. But whatever order the consul as-signed at the commencement of his term of office, he was expected to maintain throughout. Cæsar's vio-lating this usage, in his own consul-ship, was remarked upon. See Suet. Jul. 21. post novam affinitatem, Pompeium primum rogare sententiam coe-pit, cum Crassum coleret; easetque consuetudo, ut quem ordinem inter-rogandi sententias consul kalendis ja-nuariis institisset, eum toto anno conserveret. On this occasion it seems that Crassus was not present, otherwise Sallust, or Cicero himself, would undoubtedly have recorded his opinion. He was indignant, perhapse, at the suspicion of complicity cast upon him. Many of the senators ab-stained from attending, from various motives. Comp. Cic. in Catil. iv. 5; ad Att. xii. 21.

³ Recte atque ordine. A familiar idiom. Comp. Liv. xxiv. 31; xxviii. 39; xxx. 17.

⁵ Rhodiorum civitas. The state of Rhodes became famous as the greatest maritime power of the eastern Mediterranean, after the fall of Athens in the fourth century B. C. It had proved itself a faithful ally of the Romans in the war with Antiochus, king of Syria (B. C. 190), and had received from them the countries of Lycia and Caria. In the Macedonian war it inclined to the other side, or, at least, trimmed between the two. Comp. Vell. i. 9. dubia fide speculati fortanam proniores regis partibus fuisse visi sunt.

⁶ Impunitos. The Romans did not turn their arms upon them, and overthrow their commonwealth: they contented themselves with taking from them their possessions in Lycia and sere. Item bellis Punicis omnibus, cum s^epe Carthaginenses et in pace, et per inducias¹, multa nefaria facinora fecissent, numquam ipsi per occasionem² talia fecere³; magis, quid se dignum foret, quam quid in illis⁴ jure fieri posset, quarebant. ⁴ In illis, "in their case." Comp. Catil. 9: in amicis fideles; and examples there given.

⁵ Hoc idem, "this, which is a similar case to the foregoing."

⁶ Novum consilium, "a new course of proceeding," unusual, novel; i. e. the proposition of Silenus for inflicting death on the conspirators, which the senate had no right to do. No Roman citizen could, in strict law, be condemned to death, except by a vote of the people. On the other hand, the senate by the appointment of a dictator, or by investing the consuls with summary powers, by a senatus-consultum ultimum, i. e. caveat consules ne res publica aliquid detrimenti capiat, claimed the right of suspending the ordinary operation of the laws. The people always regarded these stretches of prerogative as illegal encroachments, and in the sequel declared, at the instigation of the tribune Clodius, that Cicero had committed a judicial murder in executing the conspirators by virtue of a decree of the senate.

⁷ Omnium ingenia exsuperat, "transcends the imaginations of all."

⁸ Composite, "in studied and elaborate orations." So composito: Virgil, Æn. ii. 129. Composito rumpit vocem et me destinat aræ.

casum reipublicæ miserati sunt: quæ belli sævitia esset, quæ victis acciderent, enumeravere; rapi virgines, pueros; divelli liberos a parentum complexu; matres familiarum pati, quæ victoribus collibuisserent; fana atque domos exspoliari; cædem, incendia fieri; postremo, armis, cadaveribus, cruento atque luctu omnia compleri. Sed per deos immortales! quo illa oratio pertinuit? an, uti vos infestos conjurationi faceret? Scilicet, quem res tanta atque tam atrox non permovit, eum oratio accendet? Non ita est: neque cuiquam mortalium injuriæ suæ parvæ videntur: multi eas gravius æquo habuere. Sed alia aliis licentia est¹, Patres conscripti. Qui demissi in obscurum vitam habent, si quid iracundia delinquere, pauci sciunt; fama atque fortuna eorum pares sunt: qui magno imperio prædicti in excelso æstatem agunt, eorum facta cuncti mortales novere. Ita in maxima fortuna minima licentia est: neque studere, neque odisse, sed minime irasci decet: quæ apud alios iracundia dicitur, in imperio superbia atque crudelitas appellatur. Evidem ego sic aestimo, Patres conscripti, omnes cruciatus minores, quam facinora illorum, esse: sed plerique mortales postrema meminere, et in hominibus impiis, sceleris obliiti, de poena disserunt, si ea paullo severior fuit. aut inimicitias exercere; eos mores, eam modestiam¹ viri cognovi. Verum sententia non mihi crudelis, quid enim in tales homines crudele fieri potest? sed aliena a republica nostra videtur. Nam profecto aut metus, aut injuria² te subegit, Silane, consulem designatum, genus poenæ novum decernere. De timore supervacaneum est disserere, cum, præsentim diligentia clarissimi viri, consulis, tanta præsidia sint in armis. De poena possumus equidem dicere³, id quo

² Aut metus, aut injuria, “you were impelled to propose capital punishment, either by excessive alarm (which there was no occasion for), or by a sense of the atrocity of the crime (in respect to which even capital punishment is quite inadequate).” Novum genus, in per euphemismum for death, which the Romans never named if they could avoid it. Hence the phrases supplicium for “capital punishment,” in hostium numero habere, for “to put to the sword.”

³ Possumus equidem dicere, “we may surely say.” The common opinion, adopted among the Romans themselves, that equidem is a contraction of ego quidem, is refuted by the grammarian Priscian. Sciendum tamen quod quidam equidem conjunctionem compositam esse existimant ab ego et quidem; sed errant. Simplex enim est. Et hoc maxime ex ipsa constructione orationis possumus intelligere. Nam equidem facio, equidem facis, equidem facit dicimus. He goes on to prove the same from the combination of ego and equidem, citing from this chapter of the Catilina, Equidem ego sic eritimo. Bentley maintained, however, that the use of equidem was confined at least to the first person singular down to the time of Nero: but this may be shewn to be erroneous from various passages in Plautus and Terence. Equidem then is best explained as a stronger form of quidem, the e being an intensive particle, as in edurus, egelidus, enim, ecastor. (Handii, Tursellinus, ii. 423). If we consider the e to be a long syllable, equidem must be scanned ēqu'em, as we find the d of quidem, modo, idem, &c. frequently dropped by Plautus and Terence. (Donaldson's Varronianus, p. 280. 1 ed. See Bentley on Ter. Andr. i. 3. 20). Accordingly read in Pers. i. 10. per me equ'em sint omnia protinus alba; or per me qu'em. An, quia gra-

But it is not likely that this vulgar contraction would be admitted in heroic poetry; and it is better to consider the e short, as in enim. The various constructions in which equidem occurs may be seen in the following instances taken from good and early authors:

Sallust, Catil. 52. equidem nos amissimus.

Varro, de R. R. i. 5. equidem innumerabiles mihi videntur.

Cic. Tusc. v. 35. vestræ equidem cœnæ jucundæ sunt.

Virgil, Aen. x. 29. equidem, credo, meas vulnera restant.

Plaut. Epid. iv. 2. 33. adolescentem equidem dicebant emissæ.

— Pers. ii. 2. 3. equidem si scis.

Terent. Eunuch. v. 4. 34. atque equidem orante ut ne id faceret Thaide.

Lucret. iii. 1091. certe equidem finis vitæ mortalibus instat.

Sallust, Catil. 52. scitis equidem milites.

— Jugur. 10. equidem ego vobis regnum trado.

materialism in the Chief Pontiff of the national religion. That such an avowal was really made appears from Cicero's reference to it in Catil. iv. 4. alter intelligit mortem a Dis immortalibus non esse supplicii causæ constitutam, sed aut necessitatem nature aut laborum ac miseriarum quietem esse. Cicero himself only ventures, in opposition to this opinion, to allude to the belief of the ancients as a convenient check to crime: itaque ut aliqua in vita formido improbis esset posita, apud inferos ejusmodi quedam illi antiqui supplicia impiles constituta esse voluerunt.

² Lex Porcia. The Porcian law, proposed by P. Porcius Læca, a tribune of the plebs, A.U. 454. See Liv. x. 9. Porcia lex sola pro tergo civium lata videtur, quod gravi pena, si quis verberasset necasset civem Romanum, sanxit. A citizen brought on a capital charge before the people might decline a trial by withdrawing into banishment.

Sed, eodem illo tempore, Græciæ morem² imitati, verberibus animadvertebant in cives, de condemnatis summum supplicium sumebant. Postquam respublica adolevit, et multitudine civium factiones valuere, circumveniri³ innocentes, alia hujuscemodi fieri cœpere; tum lex Porcia aliæque leges⁴ paratæ sunt, quibus legibus exilium damnatis permissum est. Hanc ego caussam, Patres conscripti, quo minus novum consilium capiamus, in primis magnam puto. Profecto virtus atque sapientia major in illis fuit, qui ex parvis opibus tantum imperium fecere, quam in nobis, qui ea bene parta vix retinemus. ¹ Bonis: scil. institutis. The dative of the thing, instead of the person, which is more usual with invidere.

² Græciæ morem. The Romans were proud of the mildness of their laws in regard to their own citizens, which they considered the mark of a free and liberal constitution. At Athens, citizens were liable to capital punishment, which was frequently inflicted on slight grounds, though the mode of death, by administering a draught of hemlock, was studiously mild.

³ Circumveniri, "were oppressed by civil arts." Comp. c. 31. circumventus ab inimicis præceps agor.

⁴ Aliæque leges. Leges is omitted by some MSS., but the repetition seems to be studied, in order to enforce upon the audience the contrast between law and illegal violence.

⁵ Publicandas, i. e. to be made publici juris, to be transferred to the public treasury.

⁶ Per municipia. Comp. Cicero, in Catil. iv. 4. adjungit gravem posnam municipibus si quis eorum vincula ruperit; horribiles custodias circumdat, etc. It appears that the Roman government allowed so much independence to the municipal administrations, that they might have refused to undertake the confinement of these prisoners. Cicero says: municipiis dispergiri jubet. Habere videtur ista res iniquitatem, si imparare velis; difficultatem, si rogas.

¹ Cum populo agat, "transact business with the people," i. e. appeal to the people.

³ M. Porcius Cato. The Porcian was a plebeian gens, but of ancient nobility. Cato the censor was great grandfather of the Cato here mentioned, who is distinguished from him by the surname of Uticensis, from the place of his death. He was born, A. U.

659. B. C. 95. Accordingly, he was at this time 32 years of age. He had not yet served any high office, and was only beginning to become known in the political world. The uncompromising opinions he expressed on this occasion marked him out as a leader for the nobles, who were dissatisfied with Pompeius and Crassus, and disdained Cicero for his obscure origin.

⁴ Orationem habuit. Cicero characterizes Cato's speech on this occasion in his pleading for Sestius, c. 28. Consule me, quum esset designatus tribunus plebis, obtulit in discriminem vitam suam; dixit eam sententiam, cuius invidiam capitis periculo sibi prestandam videbat; dixit vehementer, egit acriter, ea quæ sensit præstulit; dux, auctor, actor illarum rerum fuit. Much weight cannot be given to Brutus's authority on this point, but it is in some degree corroborated by the silence of Sallust, regarding the part which Cicero claimed in the business.

This place now exists, and is used as a chapel to a church built over it, in honour of the supposed imprisonment there of St Peter. Formerly criminals were let down into it by a hole in the chamber above.

² Ascenderis. Many editions read escenderis, with the same sense, but with no authority. Some MSS. give descenderis, which would imply descent within the walls of the carcer to the chamber called the Tullianum on the left hand, the entrance to which was reached by twelve steps. But the phrase ubi ascenderis, seems to imply some common passengers' route, and refers, probably, to the ascent of the street in which the carcer stood, from the forum, which agrees with the existing localities.

³ Camera, lapideis fornicibus vincta, "a ceiling vaulted with stone arches."

⁴ Vindices. Not the triumvirs themselves, but the carnifices, common executioners, under their orders.

⁵ Instituit, "plans." He had not men enough to form two legions complete, but he created the regular number of cohorts, maniples and cotum complet: deinde, ut quisque voluntarius, aut ex sociis in castra venerat, æqualiter distribuerat; ac brevi spatio legiones numero hominum¹ expleverat, cum initio non amplius duobus millibus habuisset. Sed ex omni copia circiter pars quarta erat militaribus armis instructa; ceteri, ut quemque casus armaverat, sparos aut lanceas, alii præacutas sudes, portabant. Sed, postquam Antonius cum exercitu adventabat, Catilina per montes iter facere, ad urbem modo, modo in Galliam versus², castra movere; hostibus occasionem pugnandi non dare; sperabat prope diem magnas copias sese habiturum, si Romæ socii incepta patravissent. Interea servitia repudiabat, cuius³ initio ad eum magnæ copiæ concurrebant, opibus conjurationis fretus; simul alienum suis rationibus⁴ existimans, videri caussam civium cum servis fugitivis communicavisse.

LVII. Sed, postquam in castra nuncius pervenit, Romæ conjurationem patefactam, de Lentulo, Cethego, ceteris, quos supra memoravi, supplicium sumptum: plerique, quos ad bellum spes rapinarum, aut novarum rerum studium illexerat, dilabuntur; reli-turies for each, appointed officers, and filled up the ranks as fast as new recruits arrived.

¹ Número hominum, with their complement of men. This is not superfluous, though expleverat follows, inasmuch as the writer wishes to mark that the number was complete, but they were incompletely armed.

Igitur, ubi iter ejus ex perfugis cognovit, castra propere movit, ac sub ipsis radicibus montium consedit³, qua illi descensus erat [in Galliam properanti]. Neque tamen Antonius procul aberat; utpote qui magno exercitu, locis æquioribus expeditus, in fuga⁴ sequeretur. Sed Catilina, postquam videt montibus atque copiis hostium sese clausum, in urbe res adversas, neque fugæ, neque præsidii ullam spem; optimum factum ratus in tali re fortunam belli tentare, statuit cum Antonio quamprimum configere. Itaque, concione advocata, hujuscemodi orationem habuit:

Coins have been found buried there, with dates reaching to this year, and no later, evidently to escape the search of his pillaging bands. Pistoia lay north-west of Fæsulae, among the Apennines, on the road to Gaul. The direct road to the Cisalpine province lay to the north, through Bononia, but Celer occupied this. Besides, Catiline wanted to get to the Allobroges in the Transalpine.

Ab his centuriones omnes lectos, et evocatos⁵, præterea ex gregariis militibus optimum quemque armatum, in primam aciem subducit. C. Manlium in dextera, Fæsulanum quemdam⁶ in sinistra parte curare⁷ jubet: ipse tum libertis et colonis⁸ propter aquilam⁹ adsistit, quam, bello Cimbrico, C. Marius in exercitu habuisse dicebatur. At ex altera parte C. Antonius, pedicornicines ocoinuerunt. But it is more common to meet with the phrase in the text. Comp. Liv. i. 1; xxiv. 15; xxvii. 47. Some critics take signa as the subject, in which case the idiom is identical with the English given above.

² Ipsæ pedes, “himself on foot;” as a foot-soldier. Comp. Senec. Ep. 104. per medias Africæ solitudines pedes duxit exercitum. Lucan, ix. 587. praeedit anheli Militis ora pedes.

³ Rupes aspera: sub. erat. The MSS. read rupe, which can only be explained, aspera (loca) ab dextra rupe, and may be pronounced inadmissible.

⁴ Reliqua signa, “the rest of his forces.” Every maniple had its own standard.

⁵ Evocatos; veterans discharged or entitled to their discharge, but continuing to serve, or returning to service, with higher pay and peculiar privileges.

⁶ Fæsulanum quemdam. Plutarch gives him the name of Furius.

⁷ Curare, “to command;” a proper military term. Comp. Jugur. 46, 57, and elsewhere. Tacitus sometimes adds the object. Annal. i. 31. inferiorem exercitum A. Cæcina curabat.

⁸ Libertis et colonis, “his own freedmen and the Sullan veterans settled in colonies;” a chosen band of men attached to his person.

bus æger¹, quod prælio adesse nequibat, M. Petreio² legato exercitum permittit. Ille cohortes veteranas, quas tumulti caussa³ conscripserat, in fronte; post eas, ceterum exercitum in subsidiis locat. Ipse equo circumiens, unumquemque nominans adpellat, hortatur, rogat, uti meminerint, se contra latrones inermes⁴, pro patria, pro liberis, pro aris atque focis suis, cernere. Homo militaris⁵, quod amplius annos triginta tribunus⁶, aut præfectus⁷, aut legatus⁸, aut prætor⁹, cum magna gloria fuerat, plerosque ipsos¹⁰ factaque

² M. Petreio. The same who was joined in command with Afranius, as a legatus of Pompey in Spain, and was there defeated by Cæsar, A.U. 705. He caused himself to be killed in single combat with Juba, king of Numidia, after the disastrous battle of Thapsus.

³ Tumulti caussa. Tumultus, a sudden occasion of peril from a foreign foe, when the ordinary rules of service are suspended, and the citizens generally liable to be called out for the defence of the state. A tumultus was usually proclaimed when the Gauls threatened an invasion, as was said to be the case now.

⁴ Inermes, “without the regular arms of legionaries.”

⁵ Homo militaris, “a man of military experience.” Comp. the same phrase above, ch. 45.

⁶ Tribunus: scil. militum. There were six of these to each legion. In early times they commanded the legion successively day by day, and even at this period a tribune might still be called by courtesy, the commander of a legion. Horace, at the age of 22, joined the army of M. Brutus in Greece, and was appointed a tribunus. He says of himself: Quod mihi pareret legio Romana tribuno. It is impossible that so young and obscure a man could have been actual commander of a legion.

⁷ Præfectus. The commander of the auxiliary horse, appointed by the imperator from among his Roman officers.

⁸ Legatus. The consul's or imperator's lieutenant, generally in command of a detachment.

⁹ Prætor: i. q. imperator. Qui præxit exercitui.

¹⁰ Plerosque ipsos, “most of them personally.”

eorum fortia noverat: ea commemorando militum animos accendebat.

LX. Sed ubi, omnibus rebus exploratis, Petreius tuba signum dat, cohortes paullatim incedere jubet; idem facit hostium exercitus. Postquam eo ventum est, unde a ferentariis¹ prælium committi posset, maximo clamore cum infestis signis² concurrunt; pila omittunt³; gladiis res geritur. Veterani⁴, pristinæ virtutis memores, cominus acriter instare: illi haud timidi resistunt: maxima vi certatur. Interea Catilina cum expeditis in prima acie versari, laborantibus succurrere, integros pro sauciis accersere, omnia providere, multum ipse pugnare, sæpe hostem ferire; strenui militis, et boni imperatoris officia simul exsequebatur. Petreius, ubi videt Catilinam, contra ac ratus erat, magna vi tendere⁵, cohortem prætoriam⁶ in medios hostes inducit; eosque perturbatos atque alios alibi resistentes interficit; deinde utrimque ex lateribus adgreditur. Manlius et Fæsulanus in primis pugnantes cadunt⁷. Postquam fusas copias, seque cum

² Cum infestis signis, "with opposing standards." Cæs. B. G. vii. 51. legiones infestis contra hostes signis constituerunt.

³ Pila omittunt. So in Cæs. B. G. i. 52, vii. 88. nostri omissis pilis gladio rem gerunt. Comp. Lucan, vii. 490:

Odiis solus civilibus ensis
Sufficit, et dextras Romana in viscera ducit.

⁴ Veterani, i. e. the soldiers of the republic, referring to the veteranae cohortes just mentioned.

⁶ Cohortem prætoriam. The emperor's body-guard.

⁷ In primis pugnantes cadunt, "foremost fighting fall," or, "are among the first to fall." The first seems the preferable interpretation.

paucis relictum videt Catilina, memor generis atque pristinæ dignitatis, in confertissimos hostes incurrit ibique pugnans confoditur.

LXI. Sed, confecto prælio, tum vero¹ cerneret, quanta audacia, quantaque vis animi fuisse in exercitu Catilinæ. Nam fere, quem quisque vivus pugnando locum ceperat, eum, amissa anima, corpore tegebat. Pauci autem, quos medios² cohors prætoria disjecerat³, paullo diversius⁴, sed omnes tamen adversis vulneribus conciderant. Catilina vero longe a suis inter hostium cadavera repertus est, paullulum etiam⁵ spirans, ferociamque animi, quam habuerat vivus⁶, in vultu retinens. Postremo, ex omni copia, neque in prælio, neque in fuga, quisquam civis ingenuus⁷ captus est. Ita cuncti suæ hostiumque vitæ juxta⁸ pepercérant. Neque tamen exercitus populi Romani lætam aut incruentam victoriam adeptus erat: nam strenuissimus quisque aut occiderat in prælio, aut graviter vulneratus discesserat. Multi autem, qui de castris, visendi, aut spoliandi gratia, processerant, volventes hostilia cadavera, amicum alii, pars hospitem, aut cognatum, reperiebant: fuere item, qui inimicos suos cognoscerent. Ita varie per omnem exercitum *lætitia*¹, mœror, luctus, atque gaudia agabantur.

⁴ Paullo diversius, "somewhat more scattered;" subaud. quidem.

¹ Lætitia properly differs from gaudium, as joy from gladness; mœror from luctus, as sorrow from mourning: luctus, from lugeo, is properly, mourning for the dead. See note on ph. 48. Lætitia, etc. "Joy and sorrow, mourning and triumph:" the former words may signify the inward feeling, the latter the outward expression. Luctus is the plural, answering to gaudia. Lucan, vii. 705:

Lachrymas luctusque remitte.

C. SALLUSTII CRISPI

JUGURTHA.

C. SALLUSTII CRISPI JUGURTHA.

I. FAŁSO queritur de natura sua¹ genus humanum, quod, imbecilla atque ævi brevis, forte potius, quam virtute regatur. Nam contra², reputando, neque majus aliud, neque præstabilius invenies³; magisque naturæ industriam hominum, quam vim aut tempus deesse. Sed dux⁴ atque imperator vitæ mortalium animus est : qui, ubi ad gloriam virtutis via grassatur⁵,

¹ Falso queritur de natura sua. It deserves to be remarked, as a proof of the nicety of ear cultivated by the Romans, that Quintilian (Inst. Orat. ix. 4) complains of the first clause of this sentence as being ἐρψθμος, rhythmical. He has been pointing out some instances of metrical clauses occurring in prose composition, and goes on to say, nec minore autem cura vitandum est quicquid ἐρψθμον quale est apud Sallustium, falso queritur de natura sua. Such nice perceptions had been lost in the time of the grammarian Diomedes. He observes, Sallustium quoque dicunt principio Jugurthæ a rhythmo cœpisse. Verum hoc totum genus reprehensionis ejusmodi est, ut si calumniatores istos audiamus sit conticescendum; quia nulla non pars orationis in aliquam rhythmi aut metri speciem potest figurari. Putsch, Gramm. Latin. p. 464.

³ Reputando...invenies, “you will discover upon reflection.”

⁴ Sed dux... Hæc Stoicorum magniloquentiam sapiunt. Gerlach. Comp. Apuleius, Apoloq. p. 486. regalis animi pars, ratione pollens, verticem hominis velut arcem et regiam insedit.

abunde pollens potensque¹ et clarus est, neque fortunæ eget; quippe quæ probitatem, industriam, alias artes bonas, neque dare neque eripere cuiquam potest. Sin, captus pravis cupidinibus, ad inertiam et voluptates corporis pessum datus est²; perniciosa lubidine paullisper usus³, ubi per secordiam vires, tempus, ingenium defluxere⁴, naturæ infirmitas accusatur: suam quisque culpam auctores⁵ ad negotia transferunt. Quod si hominibus bonarum rerum tanta cura esset, quanto studio aliena ac nihil profutura, multumque⁶ etiam periculosa, petunt; neque regerentur⁷ magis, quam regerent casus, et eo magnitudinis procederent, uti, pro mortalibus, gloria æterni fierent.

² Ad inertiam....pessum datus est, “he has sunk into sloth, &c.” The accus. of a noun, perhaps, i. q. βυρρός, “the bottom,” used adverbially, (sub-ad. secundum): pessum dari, “to be sent to the bottom.” The notion of its meaning, “cast under foot,” as if connected with pes, is derived, perhaps, from the apparent similitude of the words.

³ Usus.....accusatur, an anacoluthon: the construction in which the subject agrees with usus is dropped, and another commenced. Transl. “But if a man, ensnared by unworthy desires, has sunk into sloth and sensual voluptuousness, brief is his enjoyment of his pernicious appetites; his strength, his time, his talents, waste away through idleness, and then sooth, the infirmity of nature bears the blame.”

⁴ Defluxere. Comp. Senec. De Brev. Vite, 1. ubi vita per luxum et negligentiam defluat.

⁵ Auctores, scil. culpa, “the culprits themselves.”

⁶ Multum, “in many cases;” “frequently.”

⁷ Neque regerentur, etc.: homines is the subject to the verbs regerentur and regerent. Neque...et: men would not, on the one hand, be ruled by, but would themselves rule over chance; and, on the other, would arrive at such a pitch of greatness, as instead of being mere mortals, to become in fame immortal.

II. Nam, uti genus hominum compositum ex anima¹ et corpore, ita res cunctæ, studiaque omnia nostra, corporis alia, alia animi, naturam sequuntur. Igitur præclara facies², magnæ divitiae, ad hoc vis corporis, alia hujuscemodi omnia, brevi dilabuntur; at ingenii egregia facinora, sicuti anima, immortalia sunt. Postremo, corporis et fortunæ bonorum, ut initium, sic finis est³; omniaque orta occidunt, et aucta senescunt: *animus incorruptus*⁴, æternus, rector humani generis, agit atque habet cuncta, neque ipse habetur. Quo magis pravitas eorum admiranda est, qui, dediti corporis gaudiis⁵, per luxum atque ignaviam æstatem agunt; ceterum ingenium, quo neque melius, neque amplius aliud in natura mortalium est, incultu atque secordia torpescere sinunt; cum præsertim tam multæ variæque sint artes animi⁶, quibus summa claritudo paratur.

² Præclara facies, "remarkable beauty." Facies for beauty generally. Juv. x. 293. Sed vetat optari faciem Lucretia quamlem ipsa habuit. Lucan. x. 61. facie Spartana nocenti.

³ Ut initium sic finis est, "as they have a beginning, so have they an end."

⁴ Incorruptus, i. e. qui corrupti nequit. Tac. Hist. i. 35. Galba minantibus intrepidus, adversus blandientes incorruptus; with the force of an adj. in bilis.

⁵ Corporis gaudiis. Cicero, De Fin. ii. 4, restricts gaudium to mental pleasures, while voluptas, he says, may be used either of mind or body. But as Epicurus affirmed, that even the pleasures of the body were really referable to mental perceptions, he allows that, in this sense, the body can be said gaudere. Tusc. v. 33.

⁶ Artes animi, "occupations which exercise the intellect."

III. Verum ex his¹ magistratus et imperia², postremo omnis cura rerum publicarum, minime mihi hac tempestate cupienda videntur: quoniam neque virtuti honos³ datur; neque illi, quibus per fraudem is fuit⁴, utique⁵ tuti, aut eo magis honesti sunt. Nam vi quidem regere patriam, aut parentes⁶, quamquam et possis, et delicta corrigas, tamen importunum est⁷; cum præsertim omnes rerum mutationes cædem, fugam, aliaque hostilia, portendant: frustra autem niti, neque aliud se fatigando, nisi odium, quærere⁸, extremæ dementiae est; nisi forte quem inhonesta et perniciosa lubido tenet, potentiae paucorum decus atque libertatem suam gratificari⁹.

² Magistratus et imperia. The magistratus, scil. dictators, consuls, prætors, censors, &c., elected by the people at the comitia centuriata, had civil imperium of various kinds in the city, and were said in imperio esse; when any such officers went into the provinces, they exercised military imperium through a lex curiata, and were then said cum imperio esse.

³ Honos, in its technical sense, "civic distinction," i. q. honores. Comp. Liv. xlvi. 22, quo die novi magistratus inituri erant honorem.

⁴ Is fuit: so Kritz reads, on the authority of several MSS. The common reading is jus, or vis.

⁵ Utique. So the MSS. generally, but omitted in most editions: the word implies, forsooth, or, as they think.

⁶ Patriam, aut parentes. Comp. Catil. 6, patriam parentesque armis tegere. Jugur. 87. armis patriam parentesque tegi, where parentes can only mean parents, or generally, relatives. But parentes is used sometimes for subjects, i. q. obedientes: as Jug. 102. parentes abunde habemus, amicorum nunquam satis fuit. Here the disjunctive aut marks an opposition between the two objects, and parentes may best be construed "subjects."

⁷ Importunum est, "comes to no good end." However much the usurper may employ his power to reform abuses, still the revolution by which he has risen will engender worse evils. These remarks are supposed to point to the usurpation of Cæsar, or of the second Triumvirate.

⁸ Quærere, i. q. quærendo conquiri. Comp. Jugur. 85, 87, 89; Liv. xxv. 6.

⁹ Gratificari. The infin. depends upon the combined noun and verb lubido tenet, i. q. juvat. So Catil. 30.

IV. Ceterum, ex aliis negotiis quæ ingenio exercentur¹, in primis magno usui est memoria² rerum gestarum: cujus de virtute quia multi dixerunt, prætereundum puto; simul, ne, per insolentiam³ quis existimet, memet, studium meum⁴ laudando, extollere. Atque ego credo fore qui, quia decrevi procul a republica aetatem agere, tanto tamque utili labori meo nomen inertiae imponant; certe, quibus maxima industria videtur, salutare plebem⁵, et conviviis gratiam quererere. Qui si reputaverint, et quibus ego temporibus⁶ magistratus adeptus sim, et quales viri idem adsequi nequierint; et postea quæ genera hominum⁷ quibus mos erat (i. e. qui solebant), vendere. It is unnecessary to explain the infin. in these places as put for the gerund. Decus gratificari, i. q. decus gratis concedere, "to sacrifice honour and liberty."

² Memoria: objectively, i. q. memoratio, "the narration."

³ Per insolentiam, "from vanity."

⁴ Studium meum. Comp. Tac. Ana. xiv. 43, evidently in imitation of this passage: ne nimio amore antiqui moris studium meum extollere videret.

⁵ Salutare plebem. The candidate saluted and took by the hand, prensavit, the citizens whose votes he solicited. Comp. Liv. xxiii. 4. Hinc senatores, omissa dignitatis libertatisque memoria, plebem adulari, salutare, benigne invitare, apparatus accipere epulia. Cicero views the custom on its favourable side: de Pet. Consul. 7. nam in cæteris molestiis habet hoc tamen petitio commodi, ut possis honeste, quod in cætera vita non quæas, quoscumque velis adjungere ad amicitiam; quibuscum si alio tempore agas, ut te utantur, absurde facere videare; in petitione autem nisi id agas, et cum multis et diligenter, nullus petitor esse videare. Comp. Cic. de Off. ii. 16; Plin. Hist. Nat. x. 10. When Crassus sued for the consulship, he feasted the whole Roman people at ten thousand tables.

⁶ Quibus ego temporibus, etc. For the offices obtained by Sallust, see the notice of his life.

in senatum pervenerint; profecto existimabunt, me magis merito, quam ignavia, judicium animi mei mutavisse, majusque commodum ex otio meo, quam ex aliorum negotiis, reipublicæ venturum. Nam sæpe audivi, Q. Maximum¹, P. Scipionem², præterea civitatis nostræ præclaros viros solitos ita dicere, CUM MAJORUM IMAGINES³ INTUERENTUR, VEHEMENTISSUME SIBI ANIMUM AD VIRTUTEM ACCENDI: scilicet⁴ non ceram illam, neque figuram⁵, tantam vim in sese habere; sed, memoria rerum gestarum eam flammatum egregiis viris in pectore crescere, neque prius sedari, quam virtus eorum famam⁶ atque gloriam adæquaverit. At contra, quis est omnium his moribus⁷, quin divitiis et sump-tibus, non probitate neque industria, cum majoribus suis contendat? etiam homines novi, qui antea per virtutem soliti erant nobilitatem antevenire⁸, furtim et per latrocinia potius quam bonis artibus ad imperia et honores nituntur; proinde quasi prætura et consu-latus, atque alia omnia hujuscemodi, per se ipsa clara,

⁴ Scilicet, “forsooth, they said,” &c.

ther the memorial in wax, nor the likeness.”

⁶ Eorum famam, “the renown of the former, i. e. of the ancestors.”

⁷ His moribus, “in the present condition of public virtue;” i.e. “when public morals are so depraved.” Comp. Liv. vi. 4. Capitulum ... opus vel in hac magnificentia urbis conspicendum. Cic. de Divin. ii. 2. quod munus reipublicæ majus offerre possimus, quam si docemus atque erudimus ju-ventutem, his præsentim moribus.

magnifica sint, ac non perinde habeantur, ut eorum qui sustinent virtus est. Verum ego liberius altiusque¹ processi, dum me civitatis morum piget tædetque: nunc ad incepturn redéo².

V. Bellum scripturus sum, quod populus Romanus cum Jugurtha, rege Numidarum, gessit: primum, quia magnum et atrox, variaque victoria³ fuit: dein, quia tum primum superbis nobilitatis obviam itum est⁴; quæ contentio divina et humana cuncta permis- cuit, eoque recordiæ processit, uti studiis civilibus⁵ bellum atque vastitas Italiæ finem faceret. Sed, prius quam hujuscemodi rei initium expedio, pauca supra⁶ repetam; quo, ad cognoscendum, omnia illustria magis, magisque in aperto sint. Bello Punico secundo, quo dux Carthaginiensium Hannibal, post magnitudinem⁷ nominis Romani, Italiæ opes maxime adriverat,

² Redeo, "I resume the intention I have above professed of writing a history."

⁴ Obviām itum est, "was opposed." Late writers used a verb obviare, as Macrob. Sat. vii. 5. quibus obviandum non erat.

⁵ Uti studiis civilibus, etc. "the vehemence of party-strife resulted in war and the desolation of Italy." Lucan seems to have referred to this passage when about to write of Curius's African campaign. See Phars. iv. 687.

Nec tantum studiis civilibus arma parabat,
Private sed bella dabat Juba concitus iræ.

Hunc quoque quo superos humanaque polluit anno &c.

⁶ Supra: i. e. ex iis quæ supra sunt. So, rem longe repetere, i. q. ex iis quæ longe distant.

Masinissa, rex Numidarum, in amicitiam receptus a P. Scipione, cui postea Africano cognomen¹ ex virtute fuit, multa et præclara rei militaris facinora² fecerat: ob quæ, victis Carthaginiensibus, et capto Syphace³, cuius in Africa magnum atque late⁴ imperium valuit, populus Romanus, quascumque urbes et agros manu ceperat, regi dono dedit. Igitur amicitia Masinissæ bona atque honesta⁵ nobis permansit: imperii vitæque ejus finis idem fuit⁶. Dein Micipsa, filius, regnum attriverant. Comp. Catil. 5. hunc post dominationem L. Sulla lubido maxima invaserat reip. capiendæ: "No man had been so ambitious of power since the usurpation of Sulla."

them, and connected himself with his former enemies. After various reverses he was finally defeated by the Romans. Polybius asserts that he was led in Scipio's triumph, A.U. 553, but Livy relates that he died in confinement previously. Silius Italicus follows Livy's account, and represents the effigy of the captive as carried among others in the procession. xvii. 630:

Ante Syphax, feretro residenz, captiva premebat

Lumina, et auratae servabant colla cætæ...

Mox victas tendens Carthago ad sidera palmas

Ibat, et effigies oræ jam lenis Iberæ.

⁵ Bona atque honesta, "good and true."

⁶ Imperii vitæque ejus finis idem fuit, i. e. "his sway ceased only with his death." At his decease the grants

solus obtinuit, Mastanabale et Gulussa, fratribus, morbo absumtis. Is Adherbalem et Hiempsalem ex sese genuit; Jugurthamque, Mastanabaloris fratri filium, quem Masinissa, quod ortus ex concubina erat, privatum reliquerat¹, eodem cultu, quo liberos suos, domi² habuit.

VI. Qui ubi primum adolevit, pollens viribus, decora facie, sed multo maxime ingenio validus, non se luxu³, neque inertiae corrumpendum dedit; sed, ut mos gentis illius est, equitare, jaculari, cursu cum æqualibus certare: et, cum omnes gloria anteiret, omnibus tamen carus esse: ad hoc, pleraque tempora in venando agere, leonem atque alias feras primus, aut in primis ferire: plurimum facere, minimum ipse de se loqui. Quibus rebus Micipsa tametsi initio laetus fuerat, existimans virtutem Jugurthæ regno suo gloriæ fore; tamen, postquam hominem adolescentem, exacta sua æstate et parvis liberis⁴, magis magisque crescere intelligit, vehementer negotio permotus, multa made him by the Romans reverted to the republic, and his son Micipsa retained authority only in his patrimonial possessions.

He was a staunch champion of the senate; nevertheless he was accused by Varius, a tribune of the people, of exciting the Italians to revolt. b.c. 90. Scaurus proudly demanded of the people whether they would take the word of Varius, a Spaniard, or of Scaurus, the prince of the senate; and this appeal was answered with acclamations. Cicero extols the character of Scaurus, as a champion of the nobility. For the same reason probably Sallust seeks to depreciate him.

XXXII. Hæc atque alia hujuscemodi sæpe dicendo, Memmius populo persuadet, uti L. Dum hæc Romæ geruntur, qui in Numidia relictæ a Bestia exercitui præerant, secuti morem imperatoris sui, plurima et flagitioussima facinora fecere. Fuere qui, auro corrupti, elephantos Jugurthæ traderent: alii perfugas vendere: pars ex pacatis prædas agebant: tanta vis avaritiæ in animos eorum, veluti tabes, invaserat. At Cassius, perlata rogatione a C. Memmio, ac perculta omni nobilitate, ad Jugurtham proficiuntur: ei timido, et ex conscientia diffidenti rebus suis, persuadet, "quoniam se populo Romano dedisset, ne vim quam misericordiam ejus experiri mallet." Privatum præterea fidem suam interponit, quam ille non minoris, quam publicam, ducebat: talis ea tempestate fama de Cassio erat⁴.

Igitur Jugurtha, contra decus regium¹, cultu quam maxime miserabili, cum Cassio Romam venit: ac, tametsi in ipso magna vis animi erat, confirmatus ab omnibus, quorum potentia aut scelere cuncta ea gesserat, quæ supra diximus, C. ¹ Quæ ira fieri amat, “which anger delights to have used.” Quintilian, ix. 3. 17, says : Græca vero translata vel Sallustii plurima, quale est vulgus amat fieri. This passage, apparently corrupt, has been supposed to refer to that before us, and has been variously altered to apply to it. In Thucyd. viii. 1, we find ὅπερ φιλεῖ δῆμος ποιεῖν ; and perhaps we should read facere in Quintilian. The idiom φιλεῖ γῆγεσθαι is imitated by late Latin writers, as Auson. ad Gratian. 1. ut apud Deum fieri amat. Dictys, i. 3.

Thus extingui ferro, “to be destroyed by the sword,” is a legitimate expression, but not extingui fuga. *Ex-*stinguere (Gr. ὀριζω) “to prick or scratch out.”

Nam Albinus, Auli fratris exercitusque clade percusus, postquam decreverat non egredi provincia, quantum temporis æstivorum in imperio fuit, plerumque milites stativis castris⁶ habebat: nisi cum odos⁷, aut pabuli egestas, locum mutare subegerat. ¹ Pecunia aut honore extulerat, “had advanced in wealth or dignity;” the proper meaning of extollere, to raise, promote, is extended by a zeugma to pecunia, which should properly be connected with such a word as ornare, or locupletare.

² Conspicatur: scil. hostes; MSS. conspiciatur. But Donatus quotes Sallust's use of conspicor for conspicio; and the passage evidently requires the active sense here.

⁶ Tripliibus subsidiis, “in three lines, supporting each other;” the usual Roman battle-array.

L. Sed, ubi Numidas quietos, neque colle degredi, animadvertisit, veritus, ex anni tempore et inopia aquæ, ne siti conficeretur exercitus, Rutilium legatum cum expeditis cohortibus¹ et parte equitum præmisit ad flumen, uti locum castris antecaperet, existimans, hostes crebro impetu et transversis præliis² iter suum remoraturos, et, quoniam armis diffiderent³, lassitudinem et sitim militum tentaturos. The situation of Zama in the centre between the gulf of Carthage and the lesser Syrtis shows how narrow were the limits of the Roman province at this time. It was afterwards included in Zeugitana, the district of which Utica was the capital.

Zama, the second or eastern capital of the kings of Numidia, was styled by the Romans Regia, and is not to be confounded with the Zama where the great battle between Scipio and Hannibal was fought, which lay forty or fifty miles to the west. Eo cum delectis equitibus noctu pergit, et jam egredientibus Romanis in porta pugnam facit: simul magna voce Siccenses hortatur, “uti cohortes ab tergo circumveniant: fortunam præclari facinoris casum dare⁴: si id fecerint, postea sese in regno, illos in libertate, sine metu æstatem acturos.” Ac, ni Marius signa inferre atque evadere oppido properavisset, profecto cuncti, aut magna pars Siccentium fidem mutavissent: tanta mobilitate sese Numidæ agunt. Sed milites Jugurthini, paullisper ab rege sustentati, postquam majore vi hostes urgent, paucis amissis, profugi discedunt.

³ Capite pœnas solvit, "is executed."

⁴ Nam is ex Latio civis erat, "for he was a Latin citizen," i. e. only had the Latin franchise. By the lex Porcia a genuine Roman citizen might not be beaten with rods. This exemption had been extended to the Latins by a lex of M. Livius Drusus, A. U. 632, Plut. C. Gracch. 9, but seems to have been disregarded. The story of Turpilius is told somewhat differently by Plutarch, Mar. 8. According to this writer the charge against him was false, and got up by Marius, who instigated Metellus to put him to death to gratify his own malice against the imperator, whose retainer Turpilius had been.

His atque aliis talibus dictis, ad Cirtam oppidum iter constituant; quod ibi Metellus prædam captivosque et impedimenta locaverat. Ita, Jugurtha ratus, aut, capta urbe, operæ pretium⁴ fore, aut, si Romanus auxilio suis venisset, prælio sese certatueros. Interim Roma per litteras certior fit, provinciam Numidiam Mario datam: nam consulem factum ante acceperat. LXXXIII. Igitur, eo dolore impeditus, et quia stultitiae videbatur alienam rem periculo suo curare, legatos ad Bocchum mittit, postulatum, "ne sine caussa hostis populo Romano fieret; habere tum magnam copiam societatis amicitiaeque conjungendæ, quæ potior bello esset: quamquam opibus confideret, non debere incerta pro certis mutare: omne bellum sumi postquam plebis animos arrectos videt, propere commeatu, stipendio, armis, aliis utilibus, naves onerat: cum his A. Manlium legatum proficisci jubet. Ipse interea milites scribere, non more majorum, neque ex classibus¹, sed uti cujusque lubido erat, capite censos plerosque. Id factum alii inopia bonorum², alii per ambitionem consulis, memorabant; quod ab eo genere celebratus auctusque³ erat: et homini⁴ potentiam quærenti egentissimus quisque opportunissimus, cui neque sua curæ⁵, quippe quæ nulla sunt, et omnia cum⁶ pretio honesta videntur. Igitur Marius cum majore aliquanto numero, quam decretum erat, in Africam profectus, diebus paucis Uticam advehitur. Exercitus ei traditur a P. Rutilio legato; nam Metellus conspectum Marii fugerat, ne videret ea, quæ audita animus tolerare nequiverat.

stitutions of the commonwealth, became for the most part needy men, who served only for pay and plunder. But the concentration of property in fewer hands, and the diminution of the class of small proprietors, rendered this course of proceeding imperative. Comp. Plutarch, Mar. c. 9.

Interim novi milites sine metu pugnæ adesse: videre fugientes capi, occidi; fortissimum quemque tutissimum; armis libertatem, patriam, parentesque, et alia omnia, tegi; gloriam atque divitias quæri. Sic brevi spatio novi veteresque coaluere, et virtus omnium æqualis facta. At reges, ubi de adventu Marii cognoverunt, diversi² in locos difficiles abeunt. Nam, præter oppido propinqua, alia omnia vasta, inculta, egentia aquæ, infesta serpentibus: quarum vis, sicuti omnium ferarum, inopia cibi acrior: ad hoc natura serpentium, ipsa perniciosa, siti magis, quam alia re, accenditur. Ejus potiendi Marium maxima cupido invaserat, cum propter usum belli, tum quia res aspera videbatur; et Metellus oppidum Thalam magna gloria ceperat, haud dissimiliter situm munitumque; nisi quod apud Thalam haud longe a mœnibus aliquot fontes erant, Capsenses una³ modo, atque ea intra oppidum, jugi aqua, cetera pluvia utebantur. Id ibique, et in omni Africa, quæ procul a mari incultius agebat, eo facilius tolerabatur, quia Numidæ plerumque lacte et ferina carne vescebantur, neque salem, neque alia irritamenta gulæ quærebant; cibus illis adversum famem atque sitim, non lubidjni neque luxuriæ, erat.

Nam castello virorum atque armorum satis, magna vis frumenti, et fons aquæ; aggeribus turribusque et aliis machinationibus locus importunus: iter castellanorum angustum admodum, utrimque præcicum. Vineæ cum ingenti periculo frustra agitabantur: nam, cum eæ paullum processerant, igni aut lapidibus corrumpebantur; milites neque pro opere consistere, propter iniquitatem loci, neque inter vineas sine periculo administrare¹: optimus quisque cadere, aut sauciari; ceteris metus augeri.

perhaps on that account to Sulla, wrote a history of the social war and the civil wars of Sulla and Marius. He was born about 118 B.C., and was prætor in 78, the year in which Sulla died. Cicero speaks of him, de Leg. i. 2, Brut. 76, and esteemed him superior as an historian to his predecessors. About 150 fragments of his great work are preserved, but very short and unconnected.

Sulla natus familia nobili, sextus a Cornelio Rufino, qui bello Pyrrhi inter celeberrimos fuerat duces, quem familia ejus claritudo intermissa esset, diu ita se gessit, ut nullam petendi consulatum cogitationem habere videatur. Sallust speaks of the familia of the Sulla, a branch of the Rufini. The Cornelii were a numerous and distinguished gens in early times, and were subdivided into several familiae, e. g. patrician: Arvina, Blasio, Cethagus, Cinna, Cossus, Dolabella, Lentulus, Maluginensis, Mammula, Merenda, Merula, Rufinus, Scapula, Scipio, Sisenna, Sulla. Of these the Lentuli and Scipios had various agnomens, distinguishing individuals. The plebeian Cornelii were Galli and Balbi. Sulla introduced a vast number of his own clients and dependents into the Cornelian gens, and under the empire it was undoubtedly the most extensive of all the Roman houses.

Eo præmio illectus, Bocchus cum magna multitudine Jugurtham accedit. Ita amborum exercitu conjuncto, Marium, jam in hiberna proficiscentem, vix decima parte die reliqua, invadunt: rati noctem, quæ jam aderat, victis sibi munimento fore, et, si vicissent, nullo impedimento², quia locorum scientes erant; contra, Romanis utrumque casum in tenebris difficiliorem. Neque in eo tam aspero negotio territus Marius, aut magis, quam antea, demisso animo fuit: sed cum turma sua, quam ex fortissimis magis, quam familiarissimis, paraverat, vagari passim: ac modo laborantibus suis succurrere, modo hostes, ubi confertissimi obstiterant, invadere: manu consulere³ militibus, quoniam imperare, conturbatis omnibus, non poterat. Ceterum apud aquam Sullam cum equitibus noctem agitare jubet. Ipse paullatim dispersos milites, neque minus¹ hostibus conturbatis, in unum contrahit: dein cunctos pleno gradu² in collem subducit. Ita reges loci difficultate coacti, prælio deterrentur; neque tamen suos longius abire sinunt, sed, utroque colle multitudine circumdato, effusi consedere. Dein, crebris ignibus factis, plerumque noctis barbari suo more lætari, exultare, strepere vocibus: et ipsi duces feroces, quia non fugerent, pro victoribus agere. Sed ea cuncta Romanis, ex tenebris et editioribus locis, facilia visu magnoque hortamento erant.

XCIX. Plurimum vero Marius imperitia hostium confirmatus, quam maximum silentium haberi jubet: ne signa quidem, uti per vigilias solebant, canere³: deinde, ubi lux adventabat, defessis jam hostibus, et paullo ante somno captis, de improviso vigiles, item

CVI. Volux adveniens qu^aestorem adpellat: "Se a patre Boccho obviam illis simul, et pr^aesidio, missum." Deinde eum et proximum diem sine metu conjuncti eunt. Post, ubi castra locata, et diei vesper erat, repente Maurus incerto vultu ad Sullam adcurrit: "sibi ex speculatoribus cognitum, Jugurtham haud procul abesse:" simul, uti noctu clam secum profugeret, rogat atque hortatur. Ille animo feroci negat, "se toties fusum Numidam pertimescere; virtuti suorum satis credere: etiam si certa pestis adasset, mansurum potius, quam proditis, quos ducebat, turpi fuga incertæ, ac forsitan post paullo morbo interituræ, vitæ parceret." Ceterum, ab eodem monitus, uti noctu proficiserentur, consilium adprobat: ac statim milites cœnatos esse¹, in castris ignes quam creberrimos fieri, dein prima vigilia silentio egredi, jubet. Jamque nocturno itinere fessis omnibus, Sulla pariter cum ortu solis castra metabatur, cum equites Mauri nunciant, "Jugurtham circiter duum millium intervallo ante eos² consedisse." Quod postquam auditum, tum vero ingens metus nostros invadit: credere proditos a Voluce, et insidiis circumventos. Ac fuere, CVII. At Sulla, quamquam eadem existimabat, tamen ab injuria Maurum prohibet: suos hortatur, “uti fortem animum gererent: sæpe antea paucis strenuis adversum multitudinem bene pugnatum: quanto sibi in prælio minus pepercissent, tanto tutiores fore: nec quemquam decere, qui manus armaverit, ab inermis pedibus auxilium petere, in maximo metu nudum et cæcum corpus³ ad hostes vertere.” Deinde Volucem, quoniam hostilia faceret, Jovem maximum obtestatus, ut sceleris atque perfidiæ Bocchi testis adesset, ex castris abire⁴ jubet. Ille lacrymans orare, “ne ea crederet: nihil dolo factum, ac magis calliditate Jugurthæ, cui, videlicet speculanti, iter suum cognitum esset. Ceterum, quoniam neque ingentem multitudinem haberet, et spes opesque ejus⁵ ex patre suo penderent, credere, illum nihil palam ausurum, cum ipse filius testis adesset: quare optimum factum videri, per media ejus castra palam transire: sese, vel præmissis vel ibidem relictis Mauris, solum cum Sulla CVIII. Ibi cum Boccho Numida quidam, Aspar nomine, multum et familiariter agebat: præmissus ab Jugurtha, postquam Sullam accitum audierat, orator², et subdole speculatum Bocchi consilia: præsterea Dabar, Massugradæ filius, ex gente Masinissæ, ceterum materno genere impar; pater ejus ex concubina ortus erat; Mauro ob ingenii multa bona carus acceptusque, quem Bocchus, fidum esse Romanis multis antea tempestatibus expertus, illico ad Sullam nunciatum mittit, "paratum sese facere, quæ populus Romanus vellet: colloquio diem, locum, tempus, ipse deligeret: consulta sese omnia cum illo integra habere³: neu Jugurthæ legatum pertimesceret quo res communis licentius gereretur⁴; nam ab insidiis ejus

If this is the meaning, we should expect quin or ne instead of quo. But it would be difficult to connect this sense with what follows. Kritz's conjecture, remoto after quo, gives the contrary sense, and a much better one.

CIX. Igitur Sulla respondit: "pauca se coram Aspare locuturum; cetera occulte, aut nullo, aut quam paucissimis præsentibus:" simul edocet, quæ sibi responderentur. Postquam, sicuti voluerat, congressi³, dicit, "se missum a consule venisse quæsitum ab eo, pacem, an bellum, agitaturus foret." Tum rex, uti præceptum fuerat, post diem decimum redire jubet; ac, nihil etiam nunc decrevisse, sed illo die responsorum: deinde ambo in sua castra digressi. Ut Libycas metuat fraudes infectaque semper Punica bella dolis. For the proverbial bad faith attributed by the Romans to the Carthaginians, see Livy, xxi. 4; xxv. 39; xlii. 47; Flor. ii. 2. 6. Val. Max. vii. 4. 4. etc. Plautus has the phrase, Pœnus Pœnior. On the other hand, Attica fides was an expression for good faith, Vell.

² Attinuisse, "kept in play, amused or engaged." Attinere is commonly used in a moral sense. So Sallust, Frag. Hist. i. 19. ne nos in solitudine attineas. But by Tacitus frequently for forcible detention: e. g. attineri in custodia.

CX. “Numquam ego ratus sum² fore, uti rex maximus in hac terra, et omnium, quos novi, privato homini gratiam deberem. Et hercle, Sulla, ante te cognitum, multis orantibus, aliis ultro egomet opem tuli, nullius indigui. Id imminutum³, quod ceteri dolere solent, ego lætor; fuerit mihi [pretium⁴] eguisse aliquando amicitiae tuæ, qua apud animum meum nihil carius habeo. Id adeo experiri licet: arma, viros, pecuniam, postremo quidquid animo lubet, sume, utere: et, quoad vives, numquam tibi redditam gratiam putaveris; semper apud me integra⁵ erit: denique nihil, me sciente, frustra voles. Nam, ut ego aestimo, regem armis, quam munificentia vinci, minus flagitosum. Ceterum de re publica vestra, cuius curator huc missus es, paucis accipe. Bellum ego populo Romano neque feci, neque factum umquam volui⁶: fines meos adversum armatos armis tutatus sum.

² Nunquam ego ratus sum, “I never should have thought.” For the English conjunctive the Latin idiom here employs the indicative: Comp. above, 11. quod verbum altius, quam quisquam ratus erat, descendit. Cic. de Off. i. 23. ingenii magni est, non committere ut aliquando dicendum sit, non putaram, “I should not have thought it.”

³ Id imminutum, “the loss of this.”

⁴ Pretium. This word seems, from the great fluctuation of MSS., to be a gloss: fuerit mihi, “let it be mine.”

⁵ Integra, scil. gratia, “entire undiminished;” as a score, no part of which has been repaid and obliterated.

⁶ Negue feci, negue factum volui, “I neither made nor wished made.”

Id omitto¹, quando vobis ita placet: gerite, uti vultis, cum Jugurtha bellum. Ego flumen Mulucham, quod inter me et Micipsam fuit, non egrediar², neque Jugurtham id intrare³ sinam. Præterea, si quid meque vobisque dignum petiveris, haud repulsus abibis."

CXI. Ad ea Sulla pro se breviter et modice; de pace et de communibus rebus multis disseruit. Denique regi patefecit, "quod polliceatur, senatum et populum Romanum, quoniam amplius armis valuerint, non in gratiam habituros⁴: faciendum aliquid, quod illorum magis, quam sua, retulisse videretur: id adeo in promtu esse, quoniam Jugurthæ copiam haberet: quem si Romanis tradidisset, fore, uti illi plurimum deberetur; amicitiam, fœdus, Numidiæ partem, quam nunc peteret, ultiro adventuram." Rex primo negitare⁴: "ad infinitatem, cognitionem, præterea fœdus intervenisse: ad hoc metuere, ne fluxa fide usus, popularium animos averteret, queis et Jugurtha carus, et Romani invisi erant." Denique, sæpius fatigatus, lenitur et ex voluntate Sullæ, omnia se facturum, promittit. Ceterum ad simulandam pacem⁵, cuius Numida, defessus bello, avidissimus, quæ utilia

² Egrediar, intrare. These verbs refer to the idea of boundaries implied in the mention of the river. Statius, Sylv. i. 3. 110. Finem Nestores precor egrediare senectæ.

CXIL. At rex postero die Asparem, Jugurthæ legatum, adpellat: dicitque "sibi per Dabarem ex Sulla cognitum, posse conditionibus¹ bellum poni: quamobrem regis sui sententiam exquireret." Ille latus in castra Jugurthæ venit. Deinde, ab illo cuncta edoctus, properato itinere, post diem octavum redit ad Bocchum, et ei nunciat, "Jugurtham cupere omnia, quæ imperarentur, facere; sed Mario parum fidere²; sœpe antea cum imperatoribus Romanis pacem conventam frustra fuisse³. Ceterum, si ambobus consultum et ratam pacem vellet, daret operam, ut una ab omnibus, quasi de pace, in colloquium veniretur⁴, ibique sibi Sullam traderet: cum talem virum in potestate haberet⁵, fore, uti jussu senatus atque populi Romani fœdus fieret: neque hominem⁶ nobi-

CXIII. Hæc Maurus secum ipse diu volvens tandem promisit; ceterum dolo, an vere, parum comperimus. Sed plerumque regis voluntates, ut vehementes, sic mobiles, saepe ipse sibi adversæ. Postea, tempore et loco constituto, in colloquium uti de pace veniretur, Bocchus Sullam modo, modo Jugurthæ legatum adpellare, benigne habere, idem ambobus polliceri. Illi pariter læti, ac spei bonæ pleni. Sed nocte ea, quæ proxima fuit ante diem colloquio decretum, Maurus, adhibitis amicis, ac statim, immutata voluntate, remotis, dicitur secum ipse multa agitavisse, vultu corporis¹ pariter, atque animo, varius: quæ scilicet², tacente ipso, occulta pectoris patefuisse. Tamen postremo Sullam accersiri jubet, et ex ejus sententia Numidæ insidias tendit. Deinde, ubi dies advenit, et ei nunciatum est, Jugurtham haud procul abesse, cum paucis amicis et quæstore nostro, quasi obvius honoris caussa, procedit in tumulum, facillimum visu³ insidiantibus. Eodem Numida cum plerisque necessariis suis, inermis, uti dictum erat, accedit; ac statim, signo dato, undique simul ex insidiis invaditur. Ceteri obtruncati:

² Quæ scilicet, "which things of themselves," namely, the external signs of his irresolution, the calling and then dismissing of his people, and the changes of his countenance.

³ Facillimum viru, "convenient for keeping a look-out."

Jugurtha Sulla^e vinctus traditur, et ab eo ad Marium deductus est.

CXIV. Per idem tempus¹ advorsum Gallos ab ducibus nostris, Q. Cæpione et M. Manlio, male pugnatum; quo metu² Italia omnis contremuerat. Illique, et inde³ ad nostram memoriam Romani, sic habuere⁴; alia omnia virtuti suæ prona⁵ esse; cum Gallis pro salute⁶, non pro gloria, certare. Sed, postquam bellum in Numidia confectum, et Jugurtham vinctum adduci Romanam, nunciatum est, Marius consul absens⁷

¹ Per idem tempus. The capture of Jugurtha took place A. U. 648, B. C. 106. Cæpion and the consul Manlius were defeated in Gaul in the following year, by the Cimbri, who are here confounded with the Gauls, being properly Germans. So Cic. de Prov. Cons. 13. C. Marius influenter in Italiā Gallorum maximas copias repressit. Flor. iii. 3; Diodor. v. 32; Appian, Ilyr. 4. For the invasion of the Cimbri and Teutones, see Florus, iii. 3, and particularly Plutarch, in his life of Marius, who defeated and destroyed them in the two great battles of Aquæ Sextiæ and Vercellæ.

² Quo metu, "in consternation at which defeat."

³ Illique, et inde usque, &c., "both the Romans of that day, and since, down to my own times." This harsh and ungrammatical sentence Kritz would emend conjecturally, by reading ibique (i. q. et tum), for illique; "both then and since."

⁴ Sic habuere, "have been convinced of this." Comp. Cic. ad Div. xiv. 4. sic habeto, mi Tiro, neminem

⁵ Prona, "easy to be subdued," i. q. faciliꝝ, with which it is joined, c. 80. id facilius pronusque fuit.

⁶ Pro salute, etc. Comp. Cic. de Off. i. 12. Cum Cimbris bellum gerebatur, uter esset, non uter imperaret.

⁷ Absens. This was contrary to the law, which required that a candidate for the consulship should appear in the forum on three successive nondinae, and canvass the voters. A general who waited for a triumph might not enter the city, and accordingly was in strictness prevented from suing for the consulship. To be released from this law was considered a great honour and favour. Julius Cæsar claimed a triumph for his victories in Spain as prætor, A. U. 694, but he was eager to obtain the consulship, and was compelled to forego the coveted honour in order to acquire the more valuable dignity. Marius was elected consul a third, fourth, and fifth time also in his absence, being engaged in the war with the Cimbri. He was consul seven times in all.

factus, et ei decreta provincia Gallia; isque Kalendis Januariis magna gloria consul triumphavit¹. Ea tempestate spes atque opes civitatis in illo sitæ.

generals thus led in triumph were often put to death immediately afterwards, as Vercingetorix by Cæsar, generally strangled. But in other cases they were allowed to live. Marius was considered vainglorious for entering the senate-house in his triumphal robe. Liv. Epit. lxvii.
